Grand jury convenes

BENTON — Members of the Scott County grand jury were sworn in and given instructions by Judge Marshall Craig Tuesday afternoon in the Circuit Court office. James Beaird of Sikeston was appointed to serve as foreman.

Judge Craig apologized to the jury for having called the session so near Christmas, but said he would like for the jury to have a chance to work with Pros. Atty. Tom Gilmore before he leaves office in January while getting better aquainted with the new prosecuting attorney, Jim Moore.

Judge Craig told the jury that the grand jury is an arm of the court and that its main purpose is to advise and assist the court in determining if the laws are being properly enforced.

He said the jury can operate as an independent body, and decide for themselves when they want to meet. He cautioned them that if less than nine members are present during a session, they cannot carry on their business. He told them the grand jury is not called for the purpose of doing harm to anyone but rather to bring matters to the attention of the court.

Judge Craig told the jury they are to investigage and return indictments for violations of all character and grades of crime, if any grounds and reasonable cause for basing such indictments are found.

The jury is to examine public buildings and report on conditions; inquire into violations of game and fish laws, election laws and liquor laws.

It is also to make inquiry into the failure or refusal of county and municipal officers to do their duty, as provided by law, and make inquiry into any violation by county officers and school officials of laws relating to the finances or financial administration of the county, and, if proper, return indictments and investigate such other violations as the court may direct.

Jury members will also make inquiry into conditions that contribute and lead directly to juvenile delinquency and investigate the sale of intoxicants to minors. Judge Craig said the responsibility for contributing to delinquency of youth should be exposed and indictments returned where there has been a violation of the law.

He said the grand jury can offer helpful aid to parents and authorities by pointing to the causes and remedies as seen from an objective study of the problem. He said that it is the duty of the court to do everything possible to prevent delinquency.

The jury was further instructed to make investigations of all acts of violence resulting in injury or death of persons where circumstances show a possibility of violations of the law.

They were also instructed to investigate illegal use, possession, sale, distribution, delivery, or the giving of drugs. He said it is the grand jury's duty to make a thorough and complete investigation and to call before them all persons found to possess or thought to possess such information.

He told the jury this should be done with great care, precision and without fear, favor or partiality and without malice, hatred or ill-will.

Judge Craig instructed the jury that its deliberations are to be secret and that no one should be informed of its vote, or opinion on any matter.

Neither should it disclose evidence nor names of witnesses, nor disclose any indictment against any person not in confinement until defendant has been arrested and taken into custody. He also instructed jurors not to reveal the testimony of any witness except when such witness shall be accused of perjury.

Judge Craig told the jurors all persons except members of the grand jury should be removed from the court room before any vote. If this is not done any indictment returned would probably be defective, he said.

He stressed that it is important that the grand jury has full cooperation and support of the citizens of the county.

A report must be made by the grand jury on their investigation by March 3, 1973. This report must be made by foreman James Beaird in the presence of the grand jury and in open court.

Leo Shott of Perkins was excused by Judge Craig from attending the grand jury because of heart conditions. Another person will be selected to take Shott's place and must be present at the next meeting.

Bond asks patrol bids not be let

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov.-elect Christopher S. Bond asked the state director of planning and construction today not to let bids on Dec. 28 for a new Troop E headquarters of the highway patrol near Sikeston.

The proposed move from Poplar Bluff is the subject of litigation and has aroused charges of political influence.

In a letter to John D. Paulus, planning and construction director, Bond noted that bids are to be opened Dec. 28 for the new headquarters and said:

"As governor-elect, I formally request you not to let bids on that date for the construction of a new headquarters building, and that no bids be let or contracts be awarded for the proposed project until the entire matter can be reviewed by the newly designated superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol after confirmation by the Senate."

Bond recently designated Maj. Samuel S. Smith to succeed Col. E. I. Hockaday as superintendent of the patrol. Hockaday, who is retiring, picked the site near Sikeston as the location for the troop headquarters.

Heights is city

HAYTI-- Residents of the "Heights" area are now citizens of the City of Hayti Heights after voting 350 to 16 Tuesday to incorporate the area as the newest city in Pemiscot county.

The population of the city is 1,900.

A petition was circulated recently to get the incorporation issue put on the ballot. The action was taken, according to Pros. Atty. Art Stephenson, who has been working with leaders of the "Heights", in order to get sewer, water and other benefits of municipalities.

Initially, the "Heights" residents wanted to be annexed to the City of Hayti which borders the area. On Oct. 26, 1971, residents of the area petitioned Hayti for annexation, but, according to Stephenson, the City Council refused because the city wasn't financially capable of taking on the annexation.

Mayor, police chief and City Council members of Hayti Heights will be appointed Thursday when the County Court meets.

Arsenal swiped

DEXTER — The Harvey Culver home on Ellare Lane was burglarized Tuesday night between 5 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Taken in the burglary were a 30.06 bolt action rifle, a 12 gauge single- barrel shotgun, two .33 caliber lever action rifles, a Russian 7.62 bolt action rifle, a .12 gauge double- barrel shotgun, four .22 caliber revolvers with four inch barrels, a .22 caliber snubnosed revolver, a .38 caliber pistol, 30 eight-track stereo tapes and a federal farm registration book.

Schools Dismiss Thursday

Sikeston's schools will be dismissed for Christmas vacation at 2 p.m. Thursday, Sam Harbin, superintendent of schools, said today.

There will be a Christmas assembly tomorrow at the high school prior to dismissal. An assembly will be held today at the junior high school.

There will be Christmas parties in the classrooms of the elementary schools just prior to dismissal, Harbin said.

Boxcar steam brings firemen

Steam boiling up from behind a railroad boxcar parked behind Federal Compress & Warehouse Co. on Compress Road brought firemen to the scene early Tuesday morning.

The steam was spotted about 8:50 a.m. by a city policeman who saw what appeared to be smoke pouring out from behind a boxcar parked on a siding behind the compress. The policeman couldn't tell if there was a fire or not, so the fire department was called to the scene.

Firemen were called at 1:15 p.m. to a vacant house on the old Baker farm four miles north of Sikeston on Highway 61.

Firemen said the home was in flames when they arrived. They managed to confine damage to the inside of the home, firemen said. The cause of the blaze was unknown.

Request acknowledged

City manager Jim Huff was informed yesterday that the Office of Revenue Sharing in Washington, D.C. has received his letter of last week requesting information on why the city's revenue sharing check was $18,000 below the original estimates.

Dick Renaghan of the revenue sharing office, told Huff yesterday by telephone the Bureau of the Census is checking the city's population figures now.

Renaghan promised Huff the city would be sent a break down of the data used to determine the amount of funds the city received on its revenue sharing check. Renaghan said Sikeston would probably receive its response in the next several weeks.

The original estimates on the city's share of the federal money indicated Sikeston would receive $99,000. The city actually received only $81,000.

While original estimates were based on old information, and the checks written on updated statistics, Huff and other city officials are disappointed because the city came up short.

Huff said he is hoping the revenue sharing office made an error in figuring out the Sikeston's check. He suggested the office may have forgotten to add in the New Madrid County share of the funds. This would account for $3,000 to $4,000 of the difference between the estimate and the check, Huff said.

Stolen car recovered

An automobile reported stolen last week from the Holiday Inn parking lot, was recovered Tuesday in St. Louis, according to police reports.

The car was stolen from Harold Roberts of Potosi. It was taken Wednesday night or Thursday morning. In the car were a .22 - caliber pistol, a stereo tape player and a telephone. There was no word on whether the items were recovered.

Joseph Hyde dies at 88

MEMPHIS — Joseph Reeves Hyde, 88, a Memphis business pioneer who turned a $10.08 sale in 1907 into a wholesale food empire grossing half a billion dollars a year, died at 3 p.m. Tuesday at Methodist Hospital.

He lived at 738 Charles Place.

Services were conducted at 3 p.m. today at Madison Heights Methodist Church with Treadwell- Norris Funeral Chapel in charge. Burial was private.

Hyde's business career spanned 70 years, during which time he earned a reputation as an entrepreneur in the wholesale food business and as an outstanding Christian layman and teacher.

He was employed by J. S. Reeves & Co., a wholesale dry goods firm in Nashville from June 1900 to 1902. He inherited $1,500 from an uncle and bought stock in James Grocery Co. in Memphis.

The late Taylor Malone also bought into the firm. Both withdrew from James Grocery Co. in 1906 and opened Malone & Hyde, Inc., in Memphis.

Hyde organized the Character Builders Bible Class at Madison Heights Methodist Church in 1914 and remained active in the religious group until he became seriously ill about a month ago.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ruth Sherman Hyde.

He also leaves two daughters, Mrs. Jane Scott and Miss Margaret Hyde of Memphis; a son, Joe R. Hyde Jr. of Delray Beach, Fla., and a grandson, Joe R. Hyde III of Memphis.

Mrs. Hyde aided her husband with the Bible class and has maintained an interest in its functions.

In recent years other members of the Hyde family also played an active role in the big corporation. Joe R. Hyde Jr. served as chairman of the board until June, 1972, when he retired and moved to DelRay Beach.

Joe R. Hyde III now is president and chairman of the board of Malone & Hyde, Inc.

Gas shortage re-evaluated

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark.— Frank G. Smith, president of Arkansas- Missouri Power Company, stated today that the curtailments in deliveries of natural gas from Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation have forced the company and its subsidiary, Associated Natural Gas Company, to re- evaluate the curtailment procedures of the companies in the area supplied by Texas Eastern.

The pipeline has curtailed service to Ark- Mo and Associated in varying degrees throughout 1972 and had indicated the probability of a 10 per cent shortage on its system. On the strength of that prediction, Smith said, Ark— Mo and Associated have been curtailing service to interruptible customers on what has been very close to a business- as- usual basis.

Ark- Mo and Associated are dependent upon a special supply available in cold weather to assure there will be no failure in service to residential and small commercial customers. Because of the abnormally cold weather so far this winter, and because this peaking supply has been curtailed, it is no longer possible to serve the needs of interruptible customers when their use would require any of the remaining peak day supply, Smith said. Effective immediately, curtailments to service of interruptible customers will be greatly increased to conserve peak day supply for residential and commercial customers. Under those conditions, it is estimated that service to interruptible customers will not be available unless the average temperature is in the area of 45 degrees or above.

Smith said the 45 degrees is really not a good yardstick for any area to use since the company area affected is from Wilson, Ark., to north of Charleston, Mo. Variations in temperature in one specific area and wind conditions in any part of the area can actually cause the curtailment based on temperature to vary, he said.

"The company recognizes that many institutions such as schools, hospitals, and nursing homes in the area may have difficulty in obtaining necessary alternate fuel to maintain required warmth. In these instances, every effort will be made to assure such institutions continuing service in the event supplies of alternate fuel fall short of those necessary," Smith promised.

"Because the curtailments in service from Texas Eastern have been almost twice the 10 per cent anticipated, the companies now find it necessary to discontinue connection of any new customers of any description and will make appropriate filings with the Public Service Commissions in both Arkansas and Missouri immediately."

Smith said the combination of greater than anticipated curtailments to Associated by the pipeline companies and the abnormal cold weather experienced so far this season are the sole cause of this "regrettable" situation. The company will monitor its daily requirements carefully and the curtailment policy will be eased as soon as the company is certain that service to residential and commercial customers will not be endangered.

RIDE ON, BROTHERS AND SISTERS!

With everything from startingly cubescent dolls to do-it- yourself psychology games being endlessly touted via the tv as "just the toy your youngster can't do without for Christmas," one could hanker for simpler times, and a return to the Christmases of yore, when yuletide was less of "where it's at" and more of "what it sould be."

We therefore find it comforting to note that the good old- fashioned bicycle -- that faithful companion and sturdy charger of our youth -- is still among the most asked for of Christmas presents by even the most "turned on" youth. Something over 12.2 million bicycles are expected to be bought by year's end – an all time record, we hear -- which gives hope that common sense may not be an uncommon as we had thought. Health, fitness, economical and pollution-free transportation, and the sheer fun of getting there on one's own steam -- all help make the bike an ideal gift for those of us who want to maintain a closer and more controlled relationship to our environment ... either for ourselves or our offspring.

American made bikes with the built-in safety features of the BMA/6 STANDARD (you can spot the seal of certification on the seat mast) offer the consumer a good buy in a Christmas present that will keep on giving for many years to come.

Ride on, brothers and sister; ride on!

ENDING BLACK BLACKOUT

The "invisible American" is no longer so invisible.

For the first time, according to a study commissioned by the American Federation of Teachers, the role of the Negro in American history is being fairly and adequately treated in school textbooks.

The study, "The Negro in Modern American History Textbooks," was prepared by Irving Sloan, a junior high school teacher in Scarsdale, N.Y.

Three previous editions of the study, the first in 1966, found that junior and senior high school history texts used around the country either ignored or presented a distorted view of the American Negro.

The latest study involved an examination of 19 recently published history texts. While it found room for improvement in most of them, it also found that in terms of historical scholarship, "they meet the highest standards, almost without exception."

The time has now come to praise what American history textbooks have achieved in their treatment of black Americans, says Sloan.

"Much, if not most, and, in some instances all, that we critics, black and white, have been calling for through the years has come to pass."

For the past three years, the National Institute of Mental Health has been financing the training of Navaho medicine men, a profession in danger of becoming extinct, reports Psychic magazine.

As one Navaho explains:

PROBLEMS OF THE DECLINING BIRTH RATE

In the 1960s, most everyone was talking about the population explosion in the U.S. In the last two years, great changes have occurred largely due to a great reduction in the birth rate, according to a report in Forbes Magazine. In 1960, the average married woman had 3.6 children, enough to replace herself and her husband and some left over to produce the population explosion. In the last two years, this number has dropped drastically, and is now only 2.1 children per family. This means that a man and his wife are not quite reproducing themselves since some children will die and some will never marry.

Our population is still increasing partly because the death rate is also low. But if things continue, our population will become constant in about 70 years. The schools are already feeling the impact, with attendance in the elementary grades down about one million from the peak in 1970. You probably know teacher relatives or friends who can't find a teaching job. The National Education Association estimates that more than 130,000 teachers are unemployed. Many hospital maternity wards are also feeling the pinch, with the average ward operating at only 40 per cent of capacity.

While the number os small childern is decreasing, the number of 13-to-18- years-olds is still growing. This will continue until the present small childern get into this older age bracket. In addition, this slower growth will give us a larger percentage of older people.

What effect will the slowing of population growth have in our economy? Some people are worried about this, but the Japanese government drive to control the birth rate in that country has not bothered their economy at all. In this country, the President's Commission on Population Growth concluded that the health of our economy does not depend on a continuation in population growth. Forbes points out one advantage of having smaller families. A family with two children has a higher per-capita income than one with three or more children. This means they have more disposable income for travel, intertainment and other outside interests.

Some companies are already gearing their production to meet the changes in buying habits. Whirlpool Corp., for example, is considering the marketing of smaller appliances that will fit better into smaller homes or apartments of families with fewer childern. Borden, Inc., is considering the packaging of frozen vegetables in smaller packages for smaller-sized families. Gerber Priducts, the laggest manufacturer of baby foods, is diversifying into other consumer products.

Other compaines queried by Forbes are doing nothing, or hope the problem will "just go away." What is the implication of these changes as far as it affects each of our businesses? We can't say that we really know, but we can visualize some changes ahead in the newspaper publishing business that we hadn't considered before.

The present trend toward a lower birth rate also will have an effect on the average age of employes in all businesses. It was stated recently that half the people in the United States are under 27 years of age, that average age of employes is 33.2 years, and the average age of executives is 44.9 years. It is likely that these figures will increase if the present low birth rate continues.

Some people think that the birth rate will rise again, but the figures dispute this. Except for a temporary rise following World War II, there has been a more or less steady decrease in the U. S. birth rate since 1800. So along with everyone else, we will have to accept this and make necessary plans for the future.

A GOOD HEART

Curiosity is a great thing — if you use it right. We know of a young friend who is very curious. He is always asking almost unanswerable questions, particularly about how words got their formation and meaning. This curiosity has developed in him the habit of consulting many reference books on any subject which puzzles him, and his favorite reference book is the dictionary. The habit of using the dictionary often has enabled him to talk intelligently on many subjects.

But one should be curious only about things which will be of some benefit, just as our young friend's curiosity has created in him a desire to know more about languages which he speaks.

So, it is all right to be curious, but don't be a "busybody," always prying into other people's affairs and worrying about things which do not concern you.

The mighty Niagara Falls, which holds a sentimental meaning for many married couples who visited there on their honeymoon, held a far deeper significance to the Iroquois Indians who dwelt in the neighboring forests long ago. To them, the thundering cataract with its contrasting fury of roaring waters and ethereal misty rainbows was earthly manifestation of the power of Manitou, the Great Spirit. When an Iroquois, worthy of the acceptance of Manitou, died, his spirit became caught in the fragile mists of the Falls and ascended to the happy hunting grounds over the rainbow, whose shimmering arc was the gateway from death eternal life. But the spirit of an evil Indian fell into the angry currents of the rapids, and was hurled over the awesome drop, to be held forever captive in the depths of the whirlpool below.

NEW SEA TRANSPORT

With the advent of the nuclear age, a tendency developed to discard the traditional in matters of national defense and related areas. Ships, particularly merchant ships that have been depended upon to maintain vital supply lines in time of war, were assumed, by a few of the more shortsighted, to be an anachronism.

Events have shown that rather than diminishing in importance, merchant ships have become more than ever a measure of national security and well-being. Other nations, notably the Soviet Union, launched massive shipbuilding programs. The Soviet Union has threatened to erase the U.S. as a leading seafaring nation, and until recently, it appeared she would succeed. But, the picture has changed drastically with the adoption by the U.S. of the new 10-year, 300-ship, construction program. This program, not merely in numbers of ships, but in technological innovation, promises to introduce an age of mass cargo movement by sea.

According to a two-year study of U. . - flag merchant shipping by Harbridge House, Inc., the U. S. Merchant Marine has the potential to become thy world's leader in developing a fast, first ime in decades, have a strong competitive advantage over foreign - flag competition. The study indicates, have a strong competitive advantage over foreign - flag competition. The study indicates that the new U. S. fleet will benefit the nation in terms of balance of payments and national security to the tune of billions of dollars.

Most of the new ships will incorporate new shipping technology, such as barge - carrying ships — LASH and Seabee — and full and partial containerships. These new technology ships will increase the productive capacity of America's merchant vessels because of high - speed and quick-loading and unloading features that will vastly shorten time in port. Far from witnessing the ultimate decline of the merchant ship, the nuclear age has seen the introduction of mass, low-cost sea transportation and a breakthrough in maritime technology that is uniquely American.

THE MEANING OF MERCHANT SHIPPING

The publication, NATO'S FIFTEEN NATIONS, gives some chilling statistics on U.S. versus Russian merchant ships. They paint a picture of dwindling U.S. maritime strength that cannot be ignored. The situation is made particularly urgent by the fact that the United States is rapidly becoming a "have not" nation and depends on foreign trade for survival.

The the close of World War II, the U.S. had about 5,000 ships, totaling over 50 million tons on the high seas. This fleet has dwindled to under 1,000 active ships (80 per cent are over 20 years old) and about 14 million tons. The Russian merchant fleet, on the other hand, has grown since 1950 from 432 ships. amounting to 1.8 million deadweight tons, to a 1968 fleet of 1,400 ships of some 11 million tons. Within three years, Russia will have outstripped the U.S. Already the USSR has undertaken a world trade offensive, but to Russia, a powerful merchant fleet means more than economic power.

In the words of the NATO publication, it means, "...a major tool to promote communist ideology and revolutionary action by the oceans that reach all shores. A stream of Soviet ships sustains Castro in Cuba. They carry Red policy, as well as goods to the new nations of Africa. A good segment of those plying the Pacific steam on a 'milk run' to unload at Haiphong the petroleum products, the SAM weapons systems and missiles, the artillery, and other munitions that kill allied troops and keep North Viet Nam in the war."

Merchant ships sailing the seven seas are the trump cards in the game of maritime supremacy. That is why we need a rebirth of the U.S. Merchant Marine.

HIGH LEVEL HYPOCRISY

Quality of goods, like prices, are affected by inflation. Manufacturers and businesses of all kinds are no different than housewives. As inflation eats away at the value of the dollar, the businessman is in the same boat as the housewife. They both try to keep going as best they can. Somehow the businessman must produce and distribute products from automobiles to percolaters at a price that people can and will pay. When dollars shrink in value and business costs soar, there is no alternative but to cut corners wherever possible. As inflation continues, in spite of the ballyhoo to the contrary and drives to protect consumers, the things we buy and use are going to become more tinny and less durable-- just like our dollars.

The spendthrift bureaucrat, who votes for every spending program he can and then berates producers for not turning out top quality products, is guilty of a level of hypocrisy that should be obvious to everyone. There is no greater threat to the quality of life-- and to the quality of products and services-- than uncontrolled government spending, inflation and depreciating dollars.

CIVILLIAN REVIEW BOARDS

Higher courts of the land, especially the U.S. Supreme Court, have imposed a series of restrictions on police agencies through decisions in criminal cases during the past 20 years. These decisions involve many aspects of the law, including the obtaining of confessions and the outlawing of capital punishment. Most of the court decisions ignored the rights of the public while upholding the alleged rights of the accused. As a result, law enforcement has suffered and citizens no longer are safe in their homes and on the streets.

Mounting pressure for the establishment of police civilian review boards has constituted further harassment of police as they attempt to protect lives and property. Boards have been set up in some cities after elected officials succumbed to the pressures of ultra- liberal groups.

Civilian review boards have no place in this great nation. There are safeguards built into our laws and they suffice to protect the public against police misconduct. The grand jury is the most formidable of these watchdog agencies. Grand juries are constituted of men and women who are not connected with the law enforcement agencies. They are sworn to secrecy and to indict if there is evidence of law violation, be it by another citizen or a police officer. Grand juries are responsible to the district courts and they work with the district attorney office representatives. It is in the grand jury rooms that complaints against police ought to be aired. The civilian review boards are no substitute for grand jury members whose activities are controlled by the law itself. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Windstorm From Washington
By Jack Anderson

WILKES— BARRE, Pa.-- Six months after Hurricane Agnes ripped through Wyoming Valley, her wake is still littered with broken buildings. Less obvious is the bureaucratic havoc wrought by Frank Carlucci, a human windstorm out of Washington.

I was taken recently on a quick tour of the devastated area. Trailing my car, I later learned, were two of Carlucci's agents. They were Michael Guzzi and Larry Marion who had been assigned to find out where I went, what I said and whether I left any reporters behind. They stuck on my tail all the way to the airport to make sure I was safely out of town.

Their concern about my visit made me curious what Carlucci didn't want me to discover. As President Nixon's personal representative, he directed the federal flood relief operation.

So I dispatched three reporters-- Ken Fisher, Jim Dawson and Jack Cloherty (cq)-- to Wilkes- Barre to investigate flood relief. They brought back evidence of mismanagement, miscalculations and possible malfeasance. The FBI, which also got wind that something was wrong, has been investigating, too.

Hurricane Agnes, which battered Wyoming Valley last June 23, has now gone down as the greatest natural disaster in U.S. history. The damage is estimated at $4 billion.

Federal disaster teams rushed in swiftly to aid the flood victims. In the first few hectic weeks, thousands of bureaucrats and private citizens did heroic service.

Then Carlucci blew in from Washington and quickly rounded up 10 government press agents. He directed a high- powered public relations operation which portrayed him as a modern- day Moses who had come to part the red tape.

--Feudal Powers--

He had carte blanche authority to resolve all problems, whether it be the amount the government would loan to flood- ravaged business firms or plumbing repairs on an individual trailer. One minute, Carlucci would be dictating policy to high- ranking government officials. The next, he would meet with flood victims to dispense favors like a feudal lord.

For months, Carlucci would spend a few hours each day in the government's model mobile home in Scanlon Field, listening to citizen complaints. The cases he heard became known thereafter as "Carlucci Specials" and were handled by special assistants with authority over all government departments.

For those fortunate enough to gain an audience with him, Carlucci issued dramatic orders that often produced more waste than results. He arranged for a crane, for example, to lift a supplicant's mobile home into a back yard. He also kept a crack team of maintenance men ready to be dispatched instantly to take care of individual complaints. Often, the maintenance men waited around for hours for an assignment, while unfavored trailers went without heat or plumbing because no workmen were available.

Those who got in to see Carlucci weren't always the most worthy but the most impatient, who wouldn't wait their turn but sought special treatment. Thanks to Carlucci, they sometimes got relief that had been intended for the elderly or invalid who should have received first priority.

Those who dispensed these royal favors for Carlucci told us his main objective was to get a good press. For awhile, his press agents were "banging out about 10 or 12 press releases a day," acknowledged one staff member.

--Press Policy--

Newspapers and radio- TV stations were bombarded with press notices, carefully prepared to cover up mistakes and minimize problems. "Mobile homes are not any more susceptible for fire than ordinary houses," assured a typical press release. But the truth was contained in an internal memo, which called for fire extinguishers in each mobile home "because of the danger involved should a fire break out..." The Wilkes— Barre fire chief told us the trailer homes were "hazardous" and the area was "very fortunate" not to have had any fire fatalities.

Carlucci's administration of the flood relief program, meanwhile, was often hectic. Many residents complained about abrupt changes in government policy, arbitrary deadlines for flood relief applications and monumental mismanagement.

For example, Carlucci opposed urban renewal funds for the non- urban communities across the river from Wilkes— Barre until most of the home owners, believing there were no emergency federal funds avialable to them, arranged their own loans to rehabilitate their homes. Then he did an about- face.

Carlucci's interest in the area suddenly declined after the election. His executive assistant now handles most of the work. Carlucci helicopters in now and then to read an occasional press release.

From the time he arrived, Frank Carlucci ran the flood recovery operation with an eye more on publicity than substance. We'll have a report on even more serious irregularities in a future column.

FOOTNOTE: Carlucci assured us he made his decisions about the "specials" purely on merit. "I said 'No' a number of times," he insisted. He denied the crane incident, and said he blocked assistance for non- urban areas for a time because he was not sure "whether or not it was the most effective use of the money." He handled the flood recovery program, he said, at the same time that he was working in the White House on the budget. He contended he did the best he could under the circumstances.

With everything from startingly cubescent dolls to do-it- yourself psychology games being endlessly touted via the tv as "just the toy your youngster can't do without for Christmas," one could hanker for simpler times, and a return to the Christmases of yore, when yuletide was less of "where it's at" and more of "what it sould be."

We therefore find it comforting to note that the good old- fashioned bicycle -- that faithful companion and sturdy charger of our youth -- is still among the most asked for of Christmas presents by even the most "turned on" youth. Something over 12.2 million bicycles are expected to be bought by year's end -- an all time record, we hear -- which gives hope that common sense may not be an uncommon as we had thought. Health, fitness, economical and pollution-free transportation, and the sheer fun of getting there on one's own steam -- all help make the bike an ideal gift for those of us who want to maintain a closer and more controlled relationship to our environment ... either for ourselves or our offspring.

American made bikes with the built-in safety features of the BMA/6 STANDARD (you can spot the seal of certification on the seat mast) offer the consumer a good buy in a Christmas present that will keep on giving for many years to come.

A GOOD HEART

Curiosity is a great thing — if you use it right. We know of a young friend who is very curious. He is always asking almost unanswerable questions, particularly about how words got their formation and meaning. This curiosity has developed in him the habit of consulting many reference books on any subject which puzzles him, and his favorite reference book is the dictionary. The habit of using the dictionary often has enabled him to talk intelligently on many subjects.

But one should be curious only about things which will be of some benefit, just as our young friend's curiosity has created in him a desire to know more about languages which he speaks.

So, it is all right to be curious, but don't be a "busybody," always prying into other people's affairs and worrying about things which do not concern you.

The mighty Niagara Falls, which holds a sentimental meaning for many married couples who visited there on their honeymoon, held a far deeper significance to the Iroquois Indians who dwelt in the neighboring forests long ago. To them, the thundering cataract with its contrasting fury of roaring waters and ethereal misty raínbows was earthly manifestation of the power of Manitou, the Great Spirit. When an Iroquois, worthy of the acceptance of Manitou, died, his spirit became caught in the fragile mists of the Falls and ascended to the happy hunting grounds over the rainbow, whose shimmering arc was the gateway from death eternal life. But the spirit of an evil Indian fell into the angry currents of the rapids, and was hurled over the awesome drop, to be held forever captive in the depths of the whirlpool below.

BOOTLEG CIGARETTES CUT N. Y. TAXES $70 MILLION

At least 400 million packages of untaxed cigarettes are sold annually in New York State, even though the tax is supposed to be 15 cents per pack, notes Tax Foundation.

Due to bootlegging of cigarettes from lower- tax states, New York State and City lost $70 million in excise and sales tax revenues last year, according to a state commission. It estimated that one of every six cigarettes smoked in the state is untaxed.

NEW SEA TRANSPORT

With the advent of the nuclear age, a tendency developed to discard the traditional in matters of national defense and related areas. Ships, particularly merchant ships that have been depended upon to maintain vital supply lines in time of war, were assumed, by a few of the more shortsighted, to be an anachronism.

Events have shown that rather than diminishing in importance, merchant ships have become more than ever a measure of national security and well-being. Other nations, notably the Soviet Union, launched massive shipbuilding programs. The Soviet Union has threatened to erase the U.S. as a leading seafaring nation, and until recently, it appeared she would succeed. But, the picture has changed drastically with the adoption by the U.S. of the new 10-year, 300=ship, construction program. This program, not merely in numbers of ships, but in technological innovation, promises to introduce an age of mass cargo movement by sea.

According to a two-year study of U. . - flag merchant shipping by Harbridge House, Inc., the U. S. Merchant Marine has the potential to become thy world's leader in developing a fast, first ime in decades, have a strong competitive advantage over foreign - flag competition. The study indicates, have a strong competitive advantage over foreign - flag competition. The study indicates that the new U. S. fleet will benefit the nation in terms of balance of payments and national security to the tune of billions of dollars.

Most of the new ships will incorporate new shipping technology, such as barge - carrying ships — LASH and Seabee — and full and partial containerships. These new technology ships will increase the productive capacity of America's merchant vessels because of high - speed and quick-loading and unloading features that will vastly shorten time in port. Far from witnessing the ultimate decline of the merchant ship, the nuclear age has seen the introduction of mass, low-cost sea transportation and a breakthrough in maritime technology that is uniquely American.

THE MEANING OF MERCHANT SHIPPING

The publication, NATO'S FIFTEEN NATIONS, gives some chilling statistics on U.S. versus Russian merchant ships. They paint a picture of dwindling U.S. maritime strength that cannot be ignored. The situation is made particularly urgent by the fact that the United States is rapidly becoming a "have not" nation and depends on foreign trade for survival.

The the close of World War II, the U.S. had about 5,000 ships, totaling over 50 million tons on the high seas. This fleet has dwindled to under 1,000 active ships (80 per cent are over 20 years old) and about 14 million tons. The Russian merchant fleet, on the other hand, has grown since 1950 from 432 ships. amounting to 1.8 million deadweight tons, to a 1968 fleet of 1,400 ships of some 11 million tons. Within three years, Russia will have outstripped the U.S. Already the USSR has undertaken a world trade offensive, but to Russia, a powerful merchant fleet means more than economic power.

In the words of the NATO publication, it means, "...a major tool to promote communist ideology and revolutionary action by the oceans that reach all shores. A stream of Soviet ships sustains Castro in Cuba. They carry Red policy, as well as goods to the new nations of Africa. A good segment of those plying the Pacific steam on a 'milk run' to unload at Haiphong the petroleum products, the SAM weapons systems and missiles, the artillery, and other munitions that kill allied troops and keep North Viet Nam in the war."

Merchant ships sailing the seven seas are the trump cards in the game of maritime supremacy. That is why we need a rebirth of the U.S. Merchant Marine.

HIGH LEVEL HYPOCRISY

Quality of goods, like prices, are affected by inflation. Manufacturers and businesses of all kinds are no different than housewives. As inflation eats away at the value of the dollar, the businessman is in the same boat as the housewife. They both try to keep going as best they can. Somehow the businessman must produce and distribute products from automobiles to percolaters at a price that people can and will pay. When dollars shrink in value and business costs soar, there is no alternative but to cut corners wherever possible. As inflation continues, in spite of the ballyhoo to the contrary and drives to protect consumers, the things we buy and use are going to become more tinny and less durable-- just like our dollars.

The spendthrift bureaucrat, who votes for every spending program he can and then berates producers for not turning out top quality products, is guilty of a level of hypocrisy that should be obvious to everyone. There is no greater threat to the quality of life-- and to the quality of products and services-- than uncontrolled government spending, inflation and depreciating dollars.

CIVILLIAN REVIEW BOARDS

Higher courts of the land, especially the U.S. Supreme Court, have imposed a series of restrictions on police agencies through decisions in criminal cases during the past 20 years. These decisions involve many aspects of the law, including the obtaining of confessions and the outlawing of capital punishment. Most of the court decisions ignored the rights of the public while upholding the alleged rights of the accused. As a result, law enforcement has suffered and citizens no longer are safe in their homes and on the streets.

Mounting pressure for the establishment of police civilian review boards has constituted further harassment of police as they attempt to protect lives and property. Boards have been set up in some cities after elected officials succumbed to the pressures of ultra- liberal groups.

Civilian review boards have no place in this great nation. There are safeguards built into our laws and they suffice to protect the public against police misconduct. The grand jury is the most formidable of these watchdog agencies. Grand juries are constituted of men and women who are not connected with the law enforcement agencies. They are sworn to secrecy and to indict if there is evidence of law violation, be it by another citizen or a police officer. Grand juries are responsible to the district courts and they work with the district attorney office representatives. It is in the grand jury rooms that complaints against police ought to be aired. The civilian review boards are no substitute for grand jury members whose activities are controlled by the law itself. HLH

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Windstorm From Washington
By Jack Anderson

WILKES— BARRE, Pa.-- Six months after Hurricane Agnes ripped through Wyoming Valley, her wake is still littered with broken buildings. Less obvious is the bureaucratic havoc wrought by Frank Carlucci, a human windstorm out of Washington.

I was taken recently on a quick tour of the devastated area. Trailing my car, I later learned, were two of Carlucci's agents. They were Michael Guzzi and Larry Marion who had been assigned to find out where I went, what I said and whether I left any reporters behind. They stuck on my tail all the way to the airport to make sure I was safely out of town.

Their concern about my visit made me curious what Carlucci didn't want me to discover. As President Nixon's personal representative, he directed the federal flood relief operation.

So I dispatched three reporters-- Ken Fisher, Jim Dawson and Jack Cloherty (cq)-- to Wilkes- Barre to investigate flood relief. They brought back evidence of mismanagement, miscalculations and possible malfeasance. The FBI, which also got wind that something was wrong, has been investigating, too.

Hurricane Agnes, which battered Wyoming Valley last June 23, has now gone down as the greatest natural disaster in U.S. history. The damage is estimated at $4 billion.

Federal disaster teams rushed in swiftly to aid the flood victims. In the first few hectic weeks, thousands of bureaucrats and private citizens did heroic service.

Then Carlucci blew in from Washington and quickly rounded up 10 government press agents. He directed a high- powered public relations operation which portrayed him as a modern- day Moses who had come to part the red tape.

--Feudal Powers--

He had carte blanche authority to resolve all problems, whether it be the amount the government would loan to flood- ravaged business firms or plumbing repairs on an individual trailer. One minute, Carlucci would be dictating policy to high- ranking government officials. The next, he would meet with flood victims to dispense favors like a feudal lord.

For months, Carlucci would spend a few hours each day in the government's model mobile home in Scanlon Field, listening to citizen complaints. The cases he heard became known thereafter as "Carlucci Specials" and were handled by special assistants with authority over all government departments.

For those fortunate enough to gain an audience with him, Carlucci issued dramatic orders that often produced more waste than results. He arranged for a crane, for example, to lift a supplicant's mobile home into a back yard. He also kept a crack team of maintenance men ready to be dispatched instantly to take care of individual complaints. Often, the maintenance men waited around for hours for an assignment, while unfavored trailers went without heat or plumbing because no workmen were available.

Those who got in to see Carlucci weren't always the most worthy but the most impatient, who wouldn't wait their turn but sought special treatment. Thanks to Carlucci, they sometimes got relief that had been intended for the elderly or invalid who should have received first priority.

Those who dispersed these royal favors for Carlucci told us his main objective was to get a good press. For awhile, his press agents were "banging out about 10 or 12 press releases a day," acknowledged one staff member.

--Press Policy--

Newspapers and radio- TV stations were bombarded with press notices, carefully prepared to cover up mistakes and minimize problems. "Mobile homes are not any more susceptible for fire than ordinary houses," assured a typical press release. But the truth was contained in an internal memo, which called for fire extinguishers in each mobile home "because of the danger involved should a fire break out..." The Wilkes— Barre fire chief told us the trailer homes were "hazardous" and the area was "very fortunate" not to have had any fire fatalities.

Carlucci's administration of the flood relief program, meanwhile, was often hectic. Many residents complained about abrupt changes in government policy, arbitrary deadlines for flood relief applications and monumental mismanagement.

For example, Carlucci opposed urban renewal funds for the non- urban communities across the river from Wilkes— Barre until most of the home owners, believing there were no emergency federal funds avialable to them, arranged their own loans to rehabilitate their homes. Then he did an about- face.

Carlucci's interest in the area suddenly declined after the election. His executive assistant now handles most of the work. Carlucci helicopters in now and then to read an occasional press release.

From the time he arrived, Frank Carlucci ran the flood recovery operation with an eye more on publicity than substance. We'll have a report on even more serious irregularities in a future column.

FOOTNOTE: Carlucci assured us he made his decisions about the "specials" purely on merit. "I said 'No' a number of times," he insisted. He denied the crane incident, and said he blocked assistance for non- urban areas for a time because he was not sure "whether or not it was the most effective use of the money." He handled the flood recovery program, he said, at the same time that he was working in the White House on the budget. He contended he did the best he could under the circumstances.

Truman semiconscious

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman remains semiconscious and in very serious condition. His doctors say he cannot last indefinitely with his deteriorating kidneys performing inadequately.

At a 10 a.m. EST briefing, the hospital reported Truman was somewhat less responsive during the night but that around 9:45 a.m. he became more alert. Doctors said his over-all condition was unchanged from Tuesday and that he remained very serious.

A spokesman said Truman's kidney output for the past 24 hours was 645cc. A hospital spokesman quoted Dr. Wallace Graham, Truman's personal physician, as saying the more poison is entering the blood stream, even though kidney output is greater.

Truman's vital signs remained within normal limits, the spokesman said, with blood pressure 110-50, pulse 84, respiration 24 and temperature 97.4.

Truman's critical kidney function improved slightly Tuesday, but a spokesman for Research Hospital and Medical Center said the organs still were performing with less than 10 per cent efficiency.

"He is on sort of a plateau," said John Dreves, the hospital spokesman. "The doctors say a person cannot stay this way indefinitely ... They can't keep them (patients) functioning ... without adequate kidney function."

The 88-year-old Truman was admitted to the hospital 16 days ago, suffering from lung congestion and bronchitis. His condition deteriorated as complications of age contributed to the problems of damaged kidneys and a weakened heart.

Doctors have described his condition as very serious for the last eight days.

Truman was reported comfortable and Dreves said, "He is slightly elevated, he moves his hands about and he follows people around with his eyes."

The failing kidneys were the major concern of Truman's doctors. Because of his weakened heart and the hardening of his arteries, caused by age, the kidneys were not receiving a sufficient supply of blood.

The 33rd president's daughter, Margaret Truman Daniel, returned Tuesday to her New York home. Dreves said he did not know whether she plans a return trip to Kansas City.

Losses increase in Viet bombing

SAIGON (AP) — The United States kept up the war's heaviest bombardment of the HanoiHaiphong heartland of North Vietnam today and the U.S. Command reported the loss of another B52 heavy bomber, an A7 fighter-bomber and seven more fliers.

A report from Warsaw said three Polish sailors were killed when U.S. bombers hit a Polish cargo ship in Haiphong harbor.

The admitted U.S. losses since the bombings began Monday rose to three B52s, two fighter-bombers, including one of the Air Force's $15-million swept-wing F111s, and 15 fliers missing.

Hanoi asserted two more B52s and four more fighterbombers were shot down Tuesday night and early today in the second night of the attack. Earlier it announced the names of six B52 crewmen it said were captured Monday night and Tuesday.

The U.S. Command reported that two U.S. sailors were killed when a North Vietnamese shore battery put a fivefoot hole in an upper deck of the destroyer Goldsborough on Tuesday. Three crewmen were wounded and a crew berthing area was heavily damaged but the Navy said the destroyer kept on firing.

The North Vietnamese radio said the Polish ship Joseph Conrad was hit by U.S. bombers in Haiphong harbor Tuesday morning, damaging the loading cranes on the stern, blasting a big hole in a lifeboat and wounding four crew members.

The ship's owners said in Warsaw, however, that three sailors were killed. A spokesman for Poland's state-run Ocean Lines said the Joseph Conrad had been held in Haiphong since the harbor was mined by the United States several months ago and only a maintenance crew was aboard.

The Command gave no details on the second night of attacks on the Hanoi-Haiphong region, maintaining one of the densest news blackouts of the war. But U.S. officials said scores of B52s pounded the Hanoi-Haiphong corridor during the night, and there appeared to be no letup in the raids. Hundreds of fighter-bombers also are taking part.

Radio Hanoi said U.S. bombers "again bombed several densely populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong."

Hanoi reiterated that the bombing, despite its devastation, would not force it to accept President Nixon's peace terms.

While the U.S. Command has refused to disclose any of the targets being attacked, other sources indicated they included radio transmitters, power stations and the two rail lines between Hanoi and China.

The Goldsborough was hit as it was bombarding the coast just south of the 20th parallel. A spokesman said the ship "continued its combat mission" despite the casualties and damage.

Meanwhile, the South Vietnamese command reported more heavy fighting in Quang Tri Province below the demilitarized zone. A communique claimed South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers and U.S. fighter-bombers supporting them killed 154 North Vietnamese in two battles north and south of Quang Tri City.

Italians won't mix music with politics

MILAN (AP) — Maurizio Pollini, one of Italy's leading young pianists, tried to read a statement condemning the renewal of American bombing in North Vietnam before a concert Tuesday, but hundreds in the audience booed, whistled and shouted, "We want music, not politics!"

Two officials shot in N.Y. airport

NEW YORK (AP) — A young man, taken aside after an airport X-ray machine spotted a "questionable object" in his briefcase, shot a sky marshal and a customs agent today and then was captured in a chase onto the Kennedy Airport field, an airport spokesman said.

An examination later showed the attache case contained a spiral notebook, according to police.

The sky marshal and the customs security man were reported in satisfactory condition at Peninsula General Hospital in Queens. They were shot when the man grabbed one of their guns, the spokesman said.

The airport spokesman said Dobbelaer was preparing at 7:55 a.m. to board a flight for San Juan at Gate 4 of the Pan American World Airways passenger terminal when an X-ray machine spotted what "appeared to have a questionable object inside."

At that, he grabbed one agent's gun and shot them both, then ran onto the rainsoaked tarmac, the spokesman said.

He also dropped the briefcase, the gun and other baggage he was carrying according to a Pan American spokesman.

One of the wounded men was shot in the leg and the otherin the groin.

The Pan American spokesman said that "at this points there is no indication that the man was a skyjacker or was carrying any explosives."

Dobbelaer first appeared at the airline's information desk, carrying boots, the guitar case and the attache case, and asking about "the Barbados flight," spokesmen for the U.S. Customs Bureau and Pan American said.

But the flight was about to leave when the nervous man reached the ticket counter and he "started acting strangely," the Pan American spokesman said. The boarding gate was already locked.

The airline employes at the gate turned him over to the two officials, but the man refused to be questioned. He broke away and the guards chased him through the cavernous terminal to a corridor leading to the field.

A Pan American guard joined the fray, wrestling with him when the officials caught up with Dobbelaer. It was then that he grabbed the gun and started shooting, the Customs Bureau said.

Hearnes, Danforth differ on state merit system

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Several hundred state employes were in a state of confusion today as the result of an opinion by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth.

Danforth held Tuesday that an executive order issued by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes last May putting employes of the Public Service Commission under the merit system was invalid.

Later Hearnes issued additional orders putting employes of the comptroller's office, the administrative services section and the purchasing agent's office under the merit system.

Danforth's order was limited 165 employes of the Public Service Commission, but it left other employes in doubt as to their status also.

The governor was in New Orleans attending a meeting of the Ozarks Regional Commission and could not be reached immediately for comment.

Transportation can't help fuel shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transporation is not sufficient to move enough heating oil to five Midwestern states in time to solve a fuel-shortage caused by the need to dry grains before they spoil, federal officials have concluded.

A combinatin of heavy rain and late maturing grains has left grain-storage operators in Indian, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska with grains that cannot be stored until dried. And a cold spell that has caused increased residential heating demands has cut into fuel supplies needed to dry the grain.

Some fuel oil will be rushed to the affected areas in rainroad tankers, a spokesman for the Office of Emergency Preparedness said Tuesday, but there are not enough cars to transport all that is needed.

Officials from the Office of Oil and Gas, department of Transportation, federal Power Commision, Commerce Department, Interstate Commerce Commission and the OEP met Tuesday with representatives of 11 pipeline companies to determine what could be done.

"A lot is going to depend on old mother nature," the spokesman said. He added if a warming trend in the area continues, the problem could ease.

The admitted U.S. losses since the bombings began Monday rose to three B52s, two fighter-bombers, including one of the Air Force's $15-million swept-wing F111s, and 15 fliers missing.

Hanoi asserted two more B52s and four more fighterbombers were shot down Tuesday night and early today in the second night of the attack. Earlier it announced the names of six B52 crewmen it said were captured Monday night and Tuesday.

The U.S. Command reported that two U.S. sailors were killed when a North Vietnamese shore battery put a fivefoot hole in an upper deck of the destroyer Goldsborough on Tuesday. Three crewmen were wounded and a crew berthing area was heavily damaged but the Navy said the destroyer kept on firing.

The North Vietnamese radio said the Polish ship Joseph Conrad was hit by U.S. bombers in Haiphong harbor Tuesday morning, damaging the loading cranes on the stern, blasting a big hole in a lifeboat and wounding four crew members.

The ship's owners said in Warsaw, however, that three sailors were killed. A spokesman for Poland's state-run Ocean Lines said the Joseph Conrad had been held in Haiphong since the harbor was mined by the United States several months ago and only a maintenance crew was aboard.

The Command gave no details on the second night of attacks on the Hanoi-Haiphong region, maintaining one of the densest news blackouts of the war. But U.S. officials said scores of B52s pounded the Hanoi-Haiphong corridor during the night, and there appeared to be no letup in the raids. Hundreds of fighter-bombers also are taking part.

Radio Hanoi said U.S. bombers "again bombed several densely populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong."

Hanoi reiterated that the bombing, despite its devastation, would not force it to accept President Nixon's peace terms.

While the U.S. Command has refused to disclose any of the targets being attacked, other sources indicated they included radio transmitters, power stations and the two rail lines between Hanoi and China.

The Goldsborough was hit as it was bombarding the coast just south of the 20th parallel. A spokesman said the ship "continued its combat mission" despite the casualties and damage.

Meanwhile, the South Vietnamese command reported more heavy fighting in Quang Tri Province below the demilitarized zone. A communique claimed South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers and U.S. fighter-bombers supporting them killed 154 North Vietnamese in two battles north and south of Quang Tri City.

Firemen called

CHARLESTON — The fire department was called at 3:50 a.m. today to 612 Gail St., where a mattress was on fire.

Smoke damage to the rest of the house was reported. No one was home at the time of the fire, and the cause is undetermined.

Italians won't mix music with politics

MILAN (AP) — Maurizio Pollini, one of Italy's leading young pianists, tried to read a statement condemning the renewal of American bombing in North Vietnam before a concert Tuesday, but hundreds in the audience booed, whistled and shouted, "We want music, not politics!"

Two officials shot in N.Y. airport

NEW YORK (AP) — A young man, taken aside after an airport X-ray machine spotted a "questionable object" in his briefcase, shot a sky marshal and a customs agent today and then was captured in a chase onto the Kennedy Airport field, an airport spokesman said.

An examination later showed the attache case contained a spiral notebook, according to police.

The sky marshal and the customs security man were reported in satisfactory condition at Peninsula General Hospital in Queens. They were shot when the man grabbed one of their guns, the spokesman said.

The airport spokesman said Dobbelaer was preparing at 7:55 a.m. to board a flight for San Juan at Gate 4 of the Pan American World Airways passenger terminal when an X-ray machine spotted what "appeared to have a questionable object inside."

At that, he grabbed one agent's gun and shot them both, then ran onto the rainsoaked tarmac, the spokesman said.

He also dropped the briefcase, the gun and other baggage he was carrying according to a Pan American spokesman.

One of the wounded men was shot in the leg and the otherin the groin.

The Pan American spokesman said that "at this points there is no indication that the man was a skyjacker or was carrying any explosives."

Dobbelaer first appeared at the airline's information desk, carrying boots, the guitar case and the attache case, and asking about "the Barbados flight," spokesmen for the U.S. Customs Bureau and Pan American said.

But the flight was about to leave when the nervous man reached the ticket counter and he "started acting strangely," the Pan American spokesman said. The boarding gate was already locked.

The airline employes at the gate turned him over to the two officials, but the man refused to be questioned. He broke away and the guards chased him through the cavernous terminal to a corridor leading to the field.

A Pan American guard joined the fray, wrestling with him when the officials caught up with Dobbelaer. It was then that he grabbed the gun and started shooting, the Customs Bureau said.

Hearnes, Danforth differ on state merit system

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Several hundred state employes were in a state of confusion today as the result of an opinion by Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth.

Danforth held Tuesday that an executive order issued by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes last May putting employes of the Public Service Commission under the merit system was invalid.

Later Hearnes issued additional orders putting employes of the comptroller's office, the administrative services section and the purchasing agent's office under the merit system.

Danforth's order was limited 165 employes of the Public Service Commission, but it left other employes in doubt as to their status also.

The governor was in New Orleans attending a meeting of the Ozarks Regional Commission and could not be reached immediately for comment.

Transportation can't help fuel shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transporation is not sufficient to move enough heating oil to five Midwestern states in time to solve a fuel-shortage caused by the need to dry grains before they spoil, federal officials have concluded.

A combinatin of heavy rain and late maturing grains has left grain-storage operators in Indian, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska with grains that cannot be stored until dried. And a cold spell that has caused increased residential heating demands has cut into fuel supplies needed to dry the grain.

Some fuel oil will be rushed to the affected areas in rainroad tankers, a spokesman for the Office of Emergency Preparedness said Tuesday, but there are not enough cars to transport all that is needed.

Officials from the Office of Oil and Gas, department of Transportation, federal Power Commision, Commerce Department, Interstate Commerce Commission and the OEP met Tuesday with representatives of 11 pipeline companies to determine what could be done.

"A lot is going to depend on old mother nature," the spokesman said. He added if a warming trend in the area continues, the problem could ease.

Ag enrollment up 15 per cent

COLUMBIA — Fall enrollment for 1972 in undergraduate degree programs in agriculture at the University of Missouri - Columbia is up 15 per cent, said Homer Folks, associate dean of the UMC College of Agriculture.

This compares with an overall increase of 10.5 per cent for the 70 member institutions of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, he said.

UMC's undergraduate agriculture enrollment of 2036 students is the fifth largest in the nation this fall in terms of single campus enrollments. Those universities with larger agricultural enrollments currently include Iowa State, Ohio State, Cornell, and Purdue, respectively. The University of California has the largest agricultural enrollment with 3522 students on three campuses.

With a fall term enrollment of 1766 agriculture study, UMC had the sixth largest agricultural enrollment in the nation in 1971. The increase of 270 students this fall was the eighth largest increase among member schools for 1972, said Folks.

Santa and the ICE KING

by Lucrece Beale

SYNOPSIS: After a terrible fight, Santa, Oonik and Keotuk subdued the giant polar bear and made friends with him. Now the bear is taking them to the domain of the Ice King. Santa and Oonik hope to convince the Ice King that he must end the continuous winter that threatens to starve all who live in the North.

CHAPTER ELEVEN
ICE KING AT WORK

Oonik dragged the big sled from the igloo and Santa harnessed it to the now gentle polar bear. Then Santa and Oonik and Keotuk got on the sled and the polar bear started away.

At first the bear walked slowly and kept looking behind as if trying to understand what he was pulling and why. But after a while he got used to it and even began to enjoy it. He felt that he was stronger and more powerful than these creatures, after all, for he was taking them somewhere, not they taking him.

He began to run and the heavy sled sped over the ice like a pebble skimming over water.

Keotuk was very pleased to be a rider. Every now and then he leaped from the sled and ran along beside the bear to make sure everything was all right. But now even Keotuk could not keep up with the fast bear and the dog always tired and jumped back on the sled to travel in style.

On and on they went until finally the day came when Santa touched Oonik on the shoulder and shouted, "There it is!"

Oonik poked his head out of his fur hood and looked where Santa pointed. He saw a lofty castle made all of ice shimmering behind veils of whirling snow.

The castle stood on a hill and its bluish white spires towered into the sky. Gale winds lashed around the hill, whipping at the castle walls and howling among the steeples.

"How strange it is!" shivered Oonik when they reached the castle. "Aren't you afraid?"

"I am, indeed," confessed Santa.

Even Keotuk and the polar bear when they arrived at the castle were overwhelmed by the eerie solitude. They huddled together, the dog between the bear's big paws, for warmth and company.

Looking fearfully to right and left, Santa and Oonik went up the icy path and through the icy door and into the icy hall of the icy castle. They saw no sign of living creature but suddenly from some far away place above their heads came a rumbling, rattling, clattering thunder as if the whole castle was about to crash down on top of them.

His knees shaking, hardly daring to breathe, Oonik followed Santa up the winding stairs. Up and up, round and round, they went and the higher they went, the louder grew the hubbub until at last, nearly deafened, they arrived in a chamber at the top of the winding stairs and there they found the Ice King himself.

He was a giant of a king with deepset eyes and whitewashed hair that fell over his forehead and alabaster whiskers climbing his cheeks. Ice was on his eye-brows and icicles dripped from his whiskers. As he breathed, clouds of frost exploded from his nostrils.

With one hand he turned the handle of a colossal ice crusher while with the other hand he pumped an immense bellows up and down.

From the bellows came the howling winds, from the crushing came the avalance of ice that covered the Northern lands. Santa took a deep breath and shouted from the door, "Do stop a moment!"

But the Ice King neither heard nor saw. He worked on like one possessed as if he would never, could never stop.

Instantly the pandemonium ceased and the room was hushed. "Who are you?" thundered the Ice King staring at the visitors from inflamed blue eyes.

Santa swallowed hard and fell back a step. Oonik peeped fearfully from behind Santa's back. Then Santa cleared his throat and bravely said, "We're friends. Come to call."

They saw no sign of living creature but suddenly from some far away place above their heads came a rumbling, rattling, clattering thunder as if the whole castle was about to crash down on top of them.

His knees shaking, hardly daring to breathe, Oonik followed Santa up the winding stairs. Up and up, round and round, they went and the higher they went, the louder grew the hubbub until at last, nearly deafened, they arrived in a chamber at the top of the winding stairs and there they found the Ice King himself.

He was a giant of a king with deepset eyes and whitewashed hair that fell over his forehead and alabaster whiskers climbing his cheeks. Ice was on his eye-brows and icicles dripped from his whiskers. As he breathed, clouds of frost exploded from his nostrils.

With one hand he turned the handle of a colossal ice crusher while with the other hand he pumped an immense bellows up and down.

From the bellows came the howling winds, from the crushing came the avalance of ice that covered the Northern lands. Santa took a deep breath and shouted from the door, "Do stop a moment!"

But the Ice King neither heard nor saw. He worked on like one possessed as if he would never, could never stop.

Instantly the pandemonium ceased and the room was hushed. "Who are you?" thundered the Ice King staring at the visitors from inflamed blue eyes.

Santa swallowed hard and fell back a step. Oonik peeped fearfully from behind Santa's back. Then Santa cleared his throat and bravely said, "We're friends. Come to call."

Ann Landers

Dog lovers speak out for pets

Dear Ann Landers: I want to respond to that woman who couldn't understand why fifty million Americans were so crazy they'd walk dogs in below- zero weather, spend a fortune on getting them clipped, innoculated, registered, licensed, and trained, buy them special foods, beds, collars and coats, and even hire sitters to keep them company when they rebel against kennels at vacation time. The woman signed her letter "The Rugs In My Home Are Beautiful."

My answer is a four letter word. Love. I feel sorry for the lady with the beautiful rugs. She doesn't know what she's missing.--- Midland Michigan

From Hamilton, Ontario: I'm one of those "crazy nuts" who walked six miles to the veterinarian with a sick puppy when no other transportation was available. (Canadian winters can be brutal.) I also stayed up all night to give my puppy warm milk at frequent intervals. Our canine friends are like members of the family. I can't imagine a life without them.

From Topeka: The rugs in my house aren't beautiful but I wouldn't trade them for the most magnificent rugs in the world if it meant no dogs in my life.

From Memphis: People are becoming more and more suspicious, unpredictable and irresponsible. A dog remains a faithful friend to the end and his gratitude is unfailing. A rug could never do for my morale what my dog does.

From Cleveland: A dog is a bit of mischief wrapped inside a furry coat. If you ever saw the face of a child light up at the sight of a puppy, you'd know what it means to have a dog in the house.

From Big Rapids, Mich.: People have dogs in their lives for the same reason they marry, have children, or nurture friendship. Love and mutual respect are the basis of life's best relationships, whether between people and people or between people and dogs.

My thanks to all who wrote such heartwarming letters in behalf of your pets. We've often heard it said that dog is man's best friend, and my mail attests to the fact that the feeling is mutual.

Dear Ann Landers: That letter from the girl who was raped when she foolishly accepted a ride on the highway with a stranger, made me sit down and write to you even though it's 1:30 a.m.

I am not an old fogy and I'm not a prude. I'm 34 years old, a former model, now the mother of two little girls. When I see what has happened to so-called fashions I am not surprised that rape in the United States is at an all- time high. Anyone who wants to check the figures will see the unmistakable correlation between rape and the advent of miniskirts, the braless craze, the body- stocking look, hot pants, see- through blouses, and necklines slashed to the navel.

Some of the girls dress in such a provocative manner that they look as if they are advertising their bodies for sale-- or rent. It's no wonder they are vicitims of assault. Comment please.--- Eye Sore

Dear Eye: It is much to simplistic to infer that rape is the result of scanty or provocative attire. The criminologists do not support that theory. I agree, however, that current modes of dress, both male and female, do reflect the drastic change in society's sexual attitudes. And interestingly enough, the hemlines also reflect the economic trends. When hems go up-- so does the stock market!

Oran posts big Upset

The loss marked the first time the Indians have lost a home encounter in the last three years and the Eagles had to do it the hard way as their big man, Otis Burley, got into foul trouble, had to sit out most of the game and ended with only 10 points.

Taylor scored 20 points and kept the Eagles in the game with his rebounding and defensive efforts. Burley ran into foul trouble early and sat out half of the second period and all of the third quarter and fouled out with two minutes gone in the last period of play.

Oran took a 16-11 first period lead with Burley popping the nets for eight points. Hayti hit a hot streak in the second period and ripped the nets for 27 points while the Eagles could only hit 18 and Oran fell back 38-34 at the intermission.

Coach Joe Scott's Eagles came roaring back after the rest period and ran to a 20-16 advantage in the third period to knot the score at 54-54 and the lead seesawed back and forth in the last quarter until being tied again at 68-68 at the end of regulation time.

Taylor hit the winning basket with 10 seconds left on the clock in the overtime period to give the Oran five their ninth win of the season against one loss.

Oran took the B-game 64-57 as Keith Campbell and Ron Hurst had 14 points apiece for the winners and Brown scored 11 for the Indians.

The Bearcats managed just 13 points in the initial quarter but held their hosts to nine. In the second quarter the visitors stretched their lead to six points 28-22.

In the third period the Bearcats began to pull away from the Indians as they pumped in 18 big points while holding the hosts to 13 to open a 46-35 lead going into the final period and coasted in.

Mike Lowes poured in 30 points for Dexter to take game honors, Bruce Bishop added 15 for the Bearcats, Steve Glenn, a 6-3, and sophomore super-sub Vernon Collins shared game honors for New Madrid with 12 points each.

The loss marked the first time the Indians have lost a home encounter in the last three years and the Eagles had to do it the hard way as their big man, Otis Burley, got into foul trouble, had to sit out most of the game and ended with only 10 points.

Taylor scored 20 points and kept the Eagles in the game with his rebounding and defensive efforts. Burley ran into foul trouble early and sat out half of the second period and all of the third quarter and fouled out with two minutes gone in the last period of play.

Oran took a 16-11 first period lead with Burley popping the nets for eight points. Hayti hit a hot streak in the second period and ripped the nets for 27 points while the Eagles could only hit 18 and Oran fell back 38-34 at the intermission.

Coach Joe Scott's Eagles came roaring back after the rest period and ran to a 20-16 advantage in the third period to knot the score at 54-54 and the lead seesawed back and forth in the last quarter until being tied again at 68-68 at the end of regulation time.

Taylor hit the winning basket with 10 seconds left on the clock in the overtime period to give the Oran five their ninth win of the season against one loss.

Oran took the B-game 64-57 as Keith Campbell and Ron Hurst had 14 points apiece for the winners and Brown scored 11 for the Indians.

NEW MADRID — Coach Jim Hall's Dexter Bearcats won their fifth consecutive game Tuesday night, 68-51, over the New Madrid Indians, who suffered their sixth loss in nine decisions.

The Bearcats couldn't find the range in the first quarter against a tough New Madrid defense which Coach Hall called "the best we've seen all year." The Bearcats managed just 13 points in the initial quarter but held their hosts to nine. In the second quarter the visitors stretched their lead to six points 28-22.

In the third period the Bearcats began to pull away from the Indians as they pumped in 18 big points while holding the hosts to 13 to open a 46-35 lead going into the final period and coasted in.

Mike Lowes poured in 30 points for Dexter to take game honors, Bruce Bishop added 15 for the Bearcats, Steve Glenn, a 6-3, and sophomore super-sub Vernon Collins shared game honors for New Madrid with 12 points each.

Dexter gained a sweep of the night's action by taking the junior varsity contest 44-41 over the junior Indians. Mike Cooksey led the visitors with 14 points, while Craig Hunter scored 10 points to pace New Madrid.

Dexter will not play again until meeting Sikeston in the first round of the Bloomfield Invitational Christmas Tournament. New Madrid will be idle until Jan. 4 when the Indians travel to Lilbourn for a New Madrid County Conference contest.

FISK-- Bloomfield gave host Twin Rivers a tussle in the first half of their game Tuesday night but went down to defeat, 65- 54.

The visitors gave Twin Rivers a scare in the first half as they led 15- 13 after the first quarter and 27- 26 at halftime.

The wildcats were defanged in the second half, however, as the Royals came on strong after the intermission.

Rick Landreth and Bob Hampton split 28 points between then to lead Twin Rivers. High- point man for Bloomfield was John Nelson with 21.

Sikeston shooting poor

FREDERICKTOWN-- The cold- shooting Sikeston Bulldogs fell for the fifth consecutive time Tuesday night before a fired- up bunch of Fredericktown Black Cats, 83- 60.

The Bulldogs once again failed to hit 30 per cent of their shots, hitting 23 of 80 attempts. Their opponents were able to convert 46 per cent, sinking 28 of 61.

The game was a rough match thoughout. Elbows were thrown and arms were flying from start to finish. When the game- ending buzzer sounded, the referees had blown their whistles on 53 infractions, and Fredericktown's success at the free throw lane enabled the Black Cats to spurt to an early lead.

The Bulldogs followed a trend they have been setting lately. They began slowly, but this time they were able to put together a good second half.

Frederick town came out blistering the nets, shooting near 60 per cent at halftime, and by then had built up an insurmountable 30- point lead, 49- 19. The Bulldogs had a terribly rough first quarter, blowing easy shots inside and permitting Fredericktown to control their offensive backboards as the Black Cats build up a 22- 7 lead.

The tempo picked up in the second quarter as The Cats continued to burn and rolled up a 27- 12 advantage.

The thrid quarter was little better for Sikeston. Fredericktown began to substitute a bit, but the reserves kept up the assault as the home team outscored the Bulldogs 19- 12.

Sikeston turned things around a bit in the final period. Trailing by an impossible 37- point marging going in, the Dogs began to put it all together and outscored their opponents 29- 15. It was by far the best output of the young season for the Dogs, and was accomplished with many non- starters performing for Coach N.P. McDaniel.

Ron Marks and Jeremiah Tucker were Sikeston's leading scorers with 12 points each, but the two took a lot of shots to score those 24 points. Marks, while shooting better from outside, had trouble hitting layups. Tucker was not hitting inside shots at all.

While the starters were unable to find the mark, the reserves came up with several fine performances. Helping make the score respectable in the fourth quarter were Don Taylor, Paul Hewitt, Willie Lane, Nathaniel Moore and Robert Totton. The five put pressure on Fredericktown's reserves and shaved off nearly half of Fredericktown's lead in the fourth period.

Producing well for the Cats were 6- foot- 4 John Nations and Larry Cruse. Nations had 28 points to lead all scorers. Cruse did not shoot well but did hit 12 of 16 free throws to account for half of his 24 points. Six- foot- 3 Terry Settle was held nearly 15 points under his average, but forward Kevin Roberts proved uncannily accurate on corner jump shots and took up much of the slack.

Sikeston won the war of the boards, 43 to 35. Tucker was again the leading rebounder with 17. Nations pulled off a dozen for Black Cat Coach Perry Kegley. The Bulldogs also had just one more turnover than their hosts, 14 to 13, but cold shooting spelled their doom for the fifth straight time this year.

Another big factor in the Bulldog defeat was the performance at the charity line. While Sikeston was able to hit just 14 of 26-13 of 17 in the second half — Fredericktown was connecting on 27 of 38, to account for most of its lead. The Cats hit 13 more free throws than the Bulldogs, despite committing one more foul, 27 to 26.

Sikeston's next game is Dec. 27 in the Bloomfield Christmas tournament. Bulldog teams always seem to hit their stride in that holiday classic, but their first round opponent will be the always tough Dexter Bearcats.

AP polls beef merchants

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pro football's beef merchants, preparing marketing lists for next month's college draft, put a passing strongboy from LSU and a 280-pound defensive monster from Purdue on top.

Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers isn't so highly regarded One personnel director said "to take him is a gamble, something only a wellstocked team can afford."

Bert Jones of Louisiana State, 6-foot-3 son of former Cleveland Browns pass-catcher Dub Jones, is a near cinch to be the first quarterback plucked by the National Football League.

"You've got to look to the big boys early, too," said a Minnesota Vikings spokesman. "A tough, agile 270-pounder won't be available for long."

Among undergraduate giants, scouts look heaviest upon Boilermaker bouncer Dave Butz. He stacks that 280 pounds on a 6-foot-7 frame with an extra blessing of quickness.

"He's an offsizer at 171 pounds," said one. "Rodgers has some great abilities, but I look for the wave of big guys and a few other offensive backs to go before him."

But, another personnel chief called the Cornhusker sensation, "a man whose talent overrides his lack of size. I'd probably take him if he was available when our turn comes."

The general opinion was that the 1972 crop of seniors is excellent overall, especially in big blue-chip linemen. There are good bets at quarterback, but a shallowness in runners and wide receivers.

Otis Armstrong of Purdue appears destined to be the first running back selected in the NFL draft Jan. 31. Few scouts seem high on Greg Pruitt, a 176-pound yardage gobbler from Oklahoma who was second to Rodgers in Heisman balloting.

Lanky Chuck Foreman, 6 feet 3 and 215 from Miami, Fla., is among the most treasured running backs but many teams are interested in him more as a wide receiver.

There's always a little-known small college ace picked early in round one. The best bet this time is 6-foot-5, 255-pound Wally Chambers, a defensive end from Eastern Kentucky. Also keep an eye on 6-foot-7, 276pound John Matuszak of Tampa.

When it comes to tight ends, the scouts turn almost unanimously to 6-foot-4, 230-pound Charlie Young of No. 1-ranked Southern California.

"If we needed a tight end," said an NFL club spokesman, "I'd snatch Young because he just might start from the day his rookie season begins."

Big offensive linemen are precious items with pro teams and the current crop has more than its share. Several names popped up at every turn of the talent survey.

There's Paul Seymour, 250pound Michigan offensive tackle and brother of Chicago Bears receiver Jim Seymour. A converted tight end, he has been a fortress in the Wolverine line.

Jerry Sisemore of Texas, 6feet-4 and 255, was called "a beast, a tough s.o.b." by one personnel man and "certain to go in the top six" by another.

Alabama's John Hannah, 6feet-3 and 275, was called "the best offensive lineman I've had" by Coach Paul Bryant and the Bear gets no arguments from the pros.

Somewhat surprisingly, many NFL experts not only hesitated on Heisman man Rodgers' future, but also tread softly on Maxwell Trophy winner Brad Van Pelt of Michigan State and Outland Trophy recipient Rich Glover of Nebraska.

Glover, at 234 pounds, is felt to be too small for where he's excelled in college—as middle man in the defensive line. A shift to linebacker is probable and resulting doubts cut Glover's chances of going high in the first round.

Van Pelt, a dazzling safety at 6-feet-5 and 230, is sidestepped among top first-rounders only because he is so athletically blessed that a rich baseball contract may also be ahead.

Greg Marx is in the same category with Butz as a super defensive line prospect. The 6foot-5, 240-pound Notre Damer is touted as a better pass rusher than Walt Patulski, an Irish end who went to the Buffalo Bills as the NFL's No. 1 choice of last January.

One possibility of early selection is rangy, 6-foot-4 Southern Mississippi linebacker-kicker Ray Guy. The 194-pounder led the nation's punters with 46 yards a kick with boots that average hanging in the sky over 4.5 seconds. He also knocked through a 61-yard field goal and excels as a safetyman.

Sikeston shooting poor

FREDERICKTOWN-- The cold- shooting Sikeston Bulldogs fell for the fifth consecutive time Tuesday night before a fired- up bunch of Fredericktown Black Cats, 83- 60.

The Bulldogs once again failed to hit 30 per cent of their shots, hitting 23 of 80 attempts. Their opponents were able to convert 46 per cent, sinking 28 of 61.

The game was a rough match thoughout. Elbows were thrown and arms were flying from start to finish. When the game- ending buzzer sounded, the referees had blown their whistles on 53 infractions, and Fredericktown's success at the free throw lane enabled the Black Cats to spurt to an early lead.

The Bulldogs followed a trend they have been setting lately. They began slowly, but this time they were able to put together a good second half.

Frederick town came out blistering the nets, shooting near 60 per cent at halftime, and by then had built up an insurmountable 30- point lead, 49- 19. The Bulldogs had a terribly rough first quarter, blowing easy shots inside and permitting Fredericktown to control their offensive backboards as the Black Cats build up a 22- 7 lead.

The tempo picked up in the second quarter as The Cats continued to burn and rolled up a 27- 12 advantage.

The thrid quarter was little better for Sikeston. Fredericktown began to substitute a bit, but the reserves kept up the assault as the home team outscored the Bulldogs 19- 12.

Sikeston turned things around a bit in the final period. Trailing by an impossible 37- point marging going in, the Dogs began to put it all together and outscored their opponents 29- 15. It was by far the best output of the young season for the Dogs, and was accomplished with many non- starters performing for Coach N.P. McDaniel.

Ron Marks and Jeremiah Tucker were Sikeston's leading scorers with 12 points each, but the two took a lot of shots to score those 24 points. Marks, while shooting better from outside, had trouble hitting layups. Tucker was not hitting inside shots at all.

While the starters were unable to find the mark, the reserves came up with several fine performances. Helping make the score respectable in the fourth quarter were Don Taylor, Paul Hewitt, Willie Lane, Nathaniel Moore and Robert Totton. The five put pressure on Fredericktown's reserves and shaved off nearly half of Fredericktown's lead in the fourth period.

Producing well for the Cats were 6- foot- 4 John Nations and Larry Cruse. Nations had 28 points to lead all scorers. Cruse did not shoot well but did hit 12 of 16 free throws to account for half of his 24 points. Six- foot- 3 Terry Settle was held nearly 15 points under his average, but forward Kevin Roberts proved uncannily accurate on corner jump shots and took up much of the slack.

Sikeston won the war of the boards, 43 to 35. Tucker was again the leading rebounder with 17. Nations pulled off a dozen for Black Cat Coach Perry Kegley. The Bulldogs also had just one more turnover than their hosts, 14 to 13, but cold shooting spelled their doom for the fifth straight time this year.

Another big factor in the Bulldog defeat was the performance at the charity line. While Sikeston was able to hit just 14 of 26-13 of 17 in the second half — Fredericktown was connecting on 27 of 38, to account for most of its lead. The Cats hit 13 more free throws than the Bulldogs, despite committing one more foul, 27 to 26.

Sikeston's next game is Dec. 27 in the Bloomfield Christmas tournament. Bulldog teams always seem to hit their stride in that holiday classic, but their first round opponent will be the always tough Dexter Bearcats.

DELTA — Coach Johm Sheehy's Puxico Indians jumped ahead in the first period but had to rally in the last quarter Tuesday night to overcome the Delta Bobcats of Coach Dale Harrison for a 71-67 victory.

Carson Kelley, Delta's 6-1 junior guard, just about did the Indians in with his 27-point performance from the floor. Kelley hit 13 of 17 free throws and seven field goals. Reed led the Indians with 23 points.

Puxico jumped out front 19-15 in the first period but Delta battled within one point at the half, 33-32.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pro football's beef merchants, preparing marketing lists for next month's college draft, put a passing strongboy from LSU and a 280-pound defensive monster from Purdue on top.

Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers isn't so highly regarded One personnel director said "to take him is a gamble, something only a wellstocked team can afford."

Bert Jones of Louisiana State, 6-foot-3 son of former Cleveland Browns pass-catcher Dub Jones, is a near cinch to be the first quarterback plucked by the National Football League.

"You've got to look to the big boys early, too," said a Minnesota Vikings spokesman. "A tough, agile 270-pounder won't be available for long."

Among undergraduate giants, scouts look heaviest upon Boilermaker bouncer Dave Butz. He stacks that 280 pounds on a 6-foot-7 frame with an extra blessing of quickness.

"He's an offsizer at 171 pounds," said one. "Rodgers has some great abilities, but I look for the wave of big guys and a few other offensive backs to go before him."

But, another personnel chief called the Cornhusker sensation, "a man whose talent overrides his lack of size. I'd probably take him if he was available when our turn comes."

The general opinion was that the 1972 crop of seniors is excellent overall, especially in big blue-chip linemen. There are good bets at quarterback, but a shallowness in runners and wide receivers.

Otis Armstrong of Purdue appears destined to be the first running back selected in the NFL draft Jan. 31. Few scouts seem high on Greg Pruitt, a 176-pound yardage gobbler from Oklahoma who was second to Rodgers in Heisman balloting.

Lanky Chuck Foreman, 6 feet 3 and 215 from Miami, Fla., is among the most treasured running backs but many teams are interested in him more as a wide receiver.

There's always a little-known small college ace picked early in round one. The best bet this time is 6-foot-5, 255-pound Wally Chambers, a defensive end from Eastern Kentucky. Also keep an eye on 6-foot-7, 276pound John Matuszak of Tampa.

When it comes to tight ends, the scouts turn almost unanimously to 6-foot-4, 230-pound Charlie Young of No. 1-ranked Southern California.

"If we needed a tight end," said an NFL club spokesman, "I'd snatch Young because he just might start from the day his rookie season begins."

Big offensive linemen are precious items with pro teams and the current crop has more than its share. Several names popped up at every turn of the talent survey.

There's Paul Seymour, 250pound Michigan offensive tackle and brother of Chicago Bears receiver Jim Seymour. A converted tight end, he has been a fortress in the Wolverine line.

Jerry Sisemore of Texas, 6feet-4 and 255, was called "a beast, a tough s.o.b." by one personnel man and "certain to go in the top six" by another.

Alabama's John Hannah, 6feet-3 and 275, was called "the best offensive lineman I've had" by Coach Paul Bryant and the Bear gets no arguments from the pros.

Somewhat surprisingly, many NFL experts not only hesitated on Heisman man Rodgers' future, but also tread softly on Maxwell Trophy winner Brad Van Pelt of Michigan State and Outland Trophy recipient Rich Glover of Nebraska.

Glover, at 234 pounds, is felt to be too small for where he's excelled in college—as middle man in the defensive line. A shift to linebacker is probable and resulting doubts cut Glover's chances of going high in the first round.

Van Pelt, a dazzling safety at 6-feet-5 and 230, is sidestepped among top first-rounders only because he is so athletically blessed that a rich baseball contract may also be ahead.

Greg Marx is in the same category with Butz as a super defensive line prospect. The 6foot-5, 240-pound Notre Damer is touted as a better pass rusher than Walt Patulski, an Irish end who went to the Buffalo Bills as the NFL's No. 1 choice of last January.

College coaches change jobs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Four more colleges—Brown, Kentucky, Miami, Fla. and North Texas State—named head football coaches Tuesday while a fifth—the University of Cincinnati—lost a coach it thought it had.

This was the way it went:

—Miami promptly named Pete Elliott, its assistant athletic director and former head coach at Nebraska, California and Illinois, to succeed Curci.

—North Texas State tapped revenge-minded Hayden Fry, fired by Southern Methodist earlier this month, as successor to Rod Rust, dismissed following a 1-10 campaign. North Texas plays SMU in 1974 and a bitter Fry, who remarked after being fired that "somewhere along the line I'll pay them back for what they did to me and my assistants," admitted that the 1974 meeting "was a little motivation" in his taking the North Texas job.

—Brown, which has won only 12 games in the last eight years and hasn't had a winning season since 1964, hired John Anderson, a former assistant at Dartmouth and Boston College, who led Middlebury to an 8-0 record in 1972. He succeeds Len Jardine, who resigned last month.

—In a stunning development, Dan Radakovich, a Colorado assistant who was named head coach at Cincinnati last week, phoned athletic director George Smith and turned it down, citing "a personal and a family problem."

Other major head coaching jobs still open are at Iowa State, Northwestern and Utah State.

Pope expresses upset with renewed bombing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pope Paul VI today expressed "doleful upset" at the renewed American bombing of North Vietnam. The Danish government was preparing an official protest against the U.S. action, and condemnations also came from the Swedish, Soviet and Chinese governments.

The Pope told a crowd of 3,000 at his weekly public audience in St. Peter's Basilica he had hoped peace would return to Vietnam by Christmas.

"Does not our expectation conflict today with our doleful upset at the sudden resumption of harsh and massive war actions in that blessed Vietnam which has become the object of daily grief," he continued, "when everybody in the world thought a preliminary peaceful settlement of the long conflict to be imminent and we hoped it would coincide with the feast of Christmas?"

Denmark is allied with the United States in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but Premier Anker Joergensen announced his determination to protest to Washington amid an unprecedented wave of public indignation.

"I want the United States out of Vietnam," said the premier, who after taking office last October allowed an unofficial international war crimes commission to meet in Denmark.

"The Nixon administration is bombing a small country back to the Stone Age," said the conservative Danish newspaper B.T. "For each bomb dropped, the administration exposes its own Stone Age mentality." The country's largest daily, Ekstrabladet, headlined an editorial "Bloody Nixon."

Swedish Foreign Minister Krister Wickman accused the United States of "blind and brutal" bombing and said: "The renewed escalation creates serious fears that the war will be prolonged, something nothing could justify."

China declared the massive U.S. bombing, "in the manner of a surprise attack ... completely lays bare the inconsistency and perfidy of the U.S. government towards the peace negotiations."

Hsinhua, the official news agency, accused the United States of "trying to force the Vietnamese people to knuckle under," but said "It is clear that no threat of blackmail whatever can bring them to their knees."

The Soviet Union's three top leaders — Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin — sent a telegram to the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government "strongly condemning" the U.S. bombing.

Meanwhile Circuit Judge Frank Conley has set a hearing for next Tuesday afternoon in the suit challenging the proposed move of the southeastern Missouri headquarters.

One of the questions to be decided is whether the state Highway Commission must approve moving the headquarters from the location where it has been for 35 years and using highway funds to build the new headquarters.

At a pre- trial conference Tuesday, attorneys said Col. E. I. "Mike" Hockaday, patrol superintendent, indicated formal commission approval never had been sought before in such cases.

Another question in the case is whether Gov. Warren E. Hearnes had a right to veto a section of an appropriation bill designating Poplar Bluff as the site for the new building. He said that was an attempt to legislate in an appropriation bill.

The mayor of Poplar Bluff and other citizens there have challenged the legality of the veto in their effort to keep the headquarters in Butler County instead of having it moved to a donated site in New Madrid County near the I- 55 and U.S. 62 interchange.

Judge Conley, of Columbia, was assigned to the case after Cole County Circuit Judge James T. Riley disqualified himself at the request of the Poplar Bluff people. They said they couldn't get a fair trial in Riley's court.

The hearing next Tuesday is set for 1:30 p.m.

Suspects captured by their victim

AID — A Stoddard County property owner Monday night captured two burglary suspects at gunpoint after they ran from his home near Aid carrying his saddle and bridle.

Jimmy Van Edwards, 30, accompanied by Leonard M. Wilson, 26, held suspects Larry Dale Miller and James David McFall, both age 28 of Dexter, until Stoddard County Sheriff Edsel Edwards arrived at the scene four miles northwest of the Highway 60 and Route F intersection.

Edwards, who is in the process of moving from the house, was telephoned at his new home about 6:30 p.m. by a neighbor who saw a car parked at the unoccupied house.

When Edwards and Wilson arrived they saw the two suspects leaving the house carrying the riding gear. Edwards said he fired one shot over the heads of the fleeing suspects and they halted.

Sheriff Edwards was assisted by Troopers Larry Thompson and Charles Sisk, who arrived a short time later.

Miller, who is an ex-convict with a lengthy criminal record, and McFall were lodged in the Stoddard County Jail at Bloomfield for investigation of burglary and stealing, according to Sheriff Edwards.

One injured in wreck

One person was injured Tuesday in the only area traffic accident reported by the highway patrol.

John W. Armstrong, 56, of Poplar Bluff, received a possible back injury in a three-car pile-up at 2:10 p.m. three miles west of Fairdealing on Highway 160.

He was taken to Veteran's Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

The accident occurred when a rural mail carrier, Mary Pennington, 45, of Fairdealing, stopped at a mailbox. The Armstrong auto stopped behind the Pennington car. A truck driven by Larry Lomax, 30, of Poplar Bluff ran into the rear of the Armstrong car, knocking it into the Pennington car.

Bureau head freed till appeal ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the Los Angeles Times Washington bureau, jailed briefly for refusing to surrender tapes he said were confidential, will remain free until a federal appeals court rules on his test of the First Amendment freedoms.

The Times' John F. Lawrence was held in contempt of court Tuesday by U.S. Dist. Judge John J. Sirica who ordered the newsman jailed "until he purges himself of contempt" by turning over the subpoenaed tapes.

Lawrence was held for about two hours until the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered him released.

At an emergency hearing today, the appeals court decided Lawrence would not be returned to jail pending "further consideration of papers and argument before this court." No date was set immediately for continuation of the case.

In Los Angeles, Times publisher Otis Chandler told newsmen his paper would press the appeal on constitutional issues he said are "of utmost importance to the future of our profession."

The material Lawrence acknowledged possessing but refused to turn over to the court is a tape recording of two Times reporters' interviews with Alfred C. Baldwin III, a key figure in the allged bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters earlier this year.

The defense wants to compare Baldwin's interviews with what he says in the trial of seven men charged with the June 17 break-in and alleged bugging of the DNC offices at the Watergate apartment-hotel complex here. One of the defendants was at the time chief security officer for the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

On Oct. 5, the Times published a first-person account by Baldwin, as told to reporters Jack Nelson and Ronald J. Ostrow, detailing how he monitored telephone conversations at Democratic headquarters from a motel across the street and later delivered information to Nixon campaign headquarters.

A promise was made to keep secret certain material from the interviews as a condition for Baldwin granting the interview, the reporters said. The Times contends the confidential information is protected by the First Amendment's quarantee of press freedom.

Defense attorneys in the case asked that the tapes be subpoenaed because, they said, they might contain information they could use to challenge Baldwin's credibility.

Sirica ruled that the Constitution's guarantee of a free press does not give newsmen the right to keep secret any information that could be used as evidence in a criminal trial.

Tinnin is director

POPLAR BLUFF — The Ozark Foothills Regional Planning Commission Monday night named Brent Tinnin as the new director of its staff, succeeding Gaylon Watson. Tinnin was hired at an annual salary of $16,200.

Tinnin, son of State Sen. and Mrs. Nelson Tinnin, has been the acting director for about two months. Watson resigned earlier this year.

The new director holds a Bachelor's Degree in Public Administration and a Master's Degree in urban and Regional Planning, both earned at the University of Mississippi.

Commissioners gave routine approval to an application submitted by the City of Piedmont to the Office of Aging, U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, for a multi- purpose Senior Citizens Center at Piedmont.

The application asks for a federal grant of $30,240, which would be matched by $10,080 in local funds.

The building, which would be constructed on the west end of the old Piedmont airport property, would provide a center for educational, health, recreation, nutrition, spiritual, and transportation activities and services for elderly residing in Piedmont and the surrounding area, according to the application.

The center will accommodate approximately 300 senior citizens and could be used by all other civic and community organizations as well.

The Commission also approved an application for a grant of $187,805 from the Dept. of Labor to provide coordination and planning on all federal man- power training programs statewide. The plan is known as the Governor's Manpower Planning Secretariat.

Pope expresses upset with renewed bombing

Pope Paul VI today expressed "doleful upset" at the renewed American bombing of North Vietnam. The Danish government was preparing an official protest against the U.S. action, and condemnations also came from the Swedish, Soviet and Chinese governments.

The Pope told a crowd of 3,000 at his weekly public audience in St. Peter's Basilica he had hoped peace would return to Vietnam by Christmas.

Denmark is allied with the United States in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but Premier Anker Joergensen announced his determination to protest to Washington amid an unprecedented wave of public indignation.

"I want the United States out of Vietnam," said the premier, who after taking office last October allowed an unofficial international war crimes commission to meet in Denmark.

"The Nixon administration is bombing a small country back to the Stone Age," said the conservative Danish newspaper B.T. "For each bomb dropped, the administration exposes its own Stone Age mentality." The country's largest daily, Ekstrabladet, headlined an editorial "Bloody Nixon."

The Soviet Union's three top leaders — Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, President Nikolai V. Podgorny and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin — sent a telegram to the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government "strongly condemning" the U.S. bombing.

One person was injured Tuesday in the only area traffic accident reported by the highway patrol.

John W. Armstrong, 56, of Poplar Bluff, received a possible back injury in a three-car pile-up at 2:10 p.m. three miles west of Fairdealing on Highway 160.

He was taken to Veteran's Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

The accident occurred when a rural mail carrier, Mary Pennington, 45, of Fairdealing, stopped at a mailbox. The Armstrong auto stopped behind the Pennington car. A truck driven by Larry Lomax, 30, of Poplar Bluff ran into the rear of the Armstrong car, knocking it into the Pennington car.

Bureau head freed till appeal ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the Los Angeles Times Washington bureau, jailed briefly for refusing to surrender tapes he said were confidential, will remain free until a federal appeals court rules on his test of the First Amendment freedoms.

The Times' John F. Lawrence was held in contempt of court Tuesday by U.S. Dist. Judge John J. Sirica who ordered the newsman jailed "until he purges himself of contempt" by turning over the subpoenaed tapes.

Lawrence was held for about two hours until the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ordered him released.

At an emergency hearing today, the appeals court decided Lawrence would not be returned to jail pending "further consideration of papers and argument before this court." No date was set immediately for continuation of the case.

In Los Angeles, Times publisher Otis Chandler told newsmen his paper would press the appeal on constitutional issues he said are "of utmost importance to the future of our profession."

The material Lawrence acknowledged possessing but refused to turn over to the court is a tape recording of two Times reporters' interviews with Alfred C. Baldwin III, a key figure in the allged bugging of Democratic National Committee headquarters earlier this year.

The defense wants to compare Baldwin's interviews with what he says in the trial of seven men charged with the June 17 break-in and alleged bugging of the DNC offices at the Watergate apartment-hotel complex here. One of the defendants was at the time chief security officer for the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

On Oct. 5, the Times published a first-person account by Baldwin, as told to reporters Jack Nelson and Ronald J. Ostrow, detailing how he monitored telephone conversations at Democratic headquarters from a motel across the street and later delivered information to Nixon campaign headquarters.

A promise was made to keep secret certain material from the interviews as a condition for Baldwin granting the interview, the reporters said. The Times contends the confidential information is protected by the First Amendment's guarantee of press freedom.

Defense attorneys in the case asked that the tapes be subpoenaed because, they said, they might contain information they could use to challenge Baldwin's credibility.

Sirica ruled that the Constitution's guarantee of a free press does not give newsmen the right to keep secret any information that could be used as evidence in a criminal trial.

Tinnin is director

POPLAR BLUFF — The Ozark Foothills Regional Planning Commission Monday night named Brent Tinnin as the new director of its staff, succeeding Gaylon Watson. Tinnin was hired at an annual salary of $16,200.

Tinnin, son of State Sen. and Mrs. Nelson Tinnin, has been the acting director for about two months. Watson resigned earlier this year.

The new director holds a Bachelor's Degree in Public Administration and a Master's Degree in urban and Regional Planning, both earned at the University of Mississippi.

Commissioners gave routine approval to an application submitted by the City of Piedmont to the Office of Aging, U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, for a multi- purpose Senior Citizens Center at Piedmont.

The application asks for a federal grant of $30,240, which would be matched by $10,080 in local funds.

The building, which would be constructed on the west end of the old Piedmont airport property, would provide a center for educational, health, recreation, nutrition, spiritual, and transportation activities and services for elderly residing in Piedmont and the surrounding area, according to the application.

The center will accommodate approximately 300 senior citizens and could be used by all other civic and community organizations as well.

The Commission also approved an application for a grant of $187,805 from the Dept. of Labor to provide coordination and planning on all federal man- power training programs statewide. The plan is known as the Governor's Manpower Planning Secretariat.

Trio sailing home after moon mission

ABOARD USS TICONDEROGA (AP) — Back from the moon, their adventure behind them and history made, the men of the last Apollo are sailing toward home and a reunion with their families four days before Christmas.

Apollo 17 astronauts Eugene A. Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Harrison H. Schmitt rode the command ship America through a fiery entry into the earth's atmosphere Tuesday and a bobbing parachute fall to a perfect landing within sight of recovery ships.

Plucked from a life raft and whisked to this carrier by helicopter for a bands-and-speeches welcome, the astronauts spent their first hours back on earth undergoing physical examinations by a team of space agency doctors.

After a quick check, Dr. Charles K. LaPinta, the medical team leader, said, "I am very pleased with their condition — they look fine."

Navy chefs aboard the Ticonderoga prepared a huge welcome-aboard cake and dinner in the officers' mess for the astronauts, the ship's officers and Navy brass and congressmen and senators on hand to watch the return of Apollo 17.

After a day and a night aboard the Ticonderoga, the astronauts will fly from the carrier to Pago Pago, in American Samoa. There they will board another plane for a flight to Ellington Air Force Base, near the Manned Spacecraft Center outside of Houston, Tex., where their families await them.

While the astronauts continued the cruise toward home, officials at the space center in Texas praised the flight as the most perfect of America's six moon landings.

"I've never seen a more perfect mission than was flown on this flight," said Dr. Christopher C. Kraft, director of the Manned Spacecraft Center. "Certainly that crew was the best crew we've ever flown."

In a statement on the completion of Apollo, President Nixon said the flight "marks the end of one of the most significant chapters in the history of human endeavor."

Apollo 17's landing in the Pacific 400 miles southeast of Samoa was like the rest of the mission since launch — flawless.

A team of recovery experts helped to unload the command ship America after it too was hoisted aboard the Ticonderoga.

John P. Knox

Knox stays with state heart fund

COLUMBIA — Harry Stoeckle, M.D., of Columbia, president of the Missouri Heart Association has announced reappointment of John P. Knox Jr. as Missouri State Heart Fund chairman for 1973. This will be Mr. Knox's third year in the capacity.

Knox, even though a busy, full-time vice president of the School of the Ozarks in Point Lookout, indicated that he was happy to take some of his time to spearhead the Heart Fund drive in Missouri.

In accepting the post, he said, "Knowing the worthiness of the Heart Association's three-pronged medon of research, education and community services ...I feel honored to be again selected to serve as state Heart Fund chairman."

"Since its beginning, the American Heart Association has allocated at least half its income for research. Affiliates, like Missouri, allocate an average of 25 per cent of their income to hundreds of other research projects. Local support helps build an integrated national program that begins with promising young scientists and continues on to gifted investigators who make the study of cardiovascular diseases lifetime careers."

He continued, "Another major role is to bring new knowledge concerning cardiovascular advances to physicians and nurses so that patients everywhere may benefit. Its program of public education brings helpful knowledge to the public in all aspects of cardiovascular disease, emphasizing the early warning signs of heart attack and the dangers of ignoring these signs."

27th United Nations assembly ends

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The 27th U.N. General Assembly is history, remembered by some as the "Assembly on Terrorism," and by others as a session of negotiation instead of confrontation, detente instead of tension.

The three-month annual assembly finished at 9:58 p.m. EST Tuesday with the traditional one minute of silent meditation by the envoys of the 132 countries.

At the end, only 14 spectators were in the 150-seat public gallery and one of those appeared to be asleep.

He had stayed behind to sign autographs, shake hands with fellow diplomats and thank them for the "fantastic" way he had been received during two years as top U.S. delegate.

Bush is leaving for Washington to become chairman of the Republican National Committee. John Scali, White House foreign policy consultant and former Associated Press and American Broadcasting Co. reporter, has been named to succeed him.

In his farewell speech to the Assembly, Bush said perhaps the 27th assembly was dull but probably this was because it "moved forward along the road that leads away from the sensational politics of confrontation and rhetoric toward the kind of mature diplomacy that seeks practical solutions to the problems of mankind."

The retiring president of the assembly, Deputy Foreign Minister Stanislaw Trepczynski of Poland, said it was "thanks to the new climate of detente" in the world that the sharp political, ideological and other differences among U.N. members were not able to hamper U.N. efforts to strengthen international cooperation.

While the Middle East dispute remained stalemated, some U.N. diplomats said it was a triumph of negotiations over confrontation that the assembly had not worsened it.

Through efforts of many Western, nonaligned and moderate Arab countries, the final Middle East resolution was toned down from its original draft version to the point that Israel dropped threats to renounce the 1967 U.N. formula for eventual settlement.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah was one of those who called the session the "Assembly on Terrorism" because terrorism was the major new issue, prompted by the massacre of Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics in September.

The United States and other Western powers were critical of the assembly for voting to limit antiterrorist efforts during the coming year to a study and rejecting treaty proposals.

George Washington referred to the nation's capital as the Federal City.

EPA gives ok to issue state waste discharge permits here

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Environmental Protection Agency officials announced Tuesday they have granted the state of Missouri authority to issue waste discharge permits, which must be obtained by cities, industries and agricultural concerns before they can discharge waste into navigable waters.

The EPA said Missouri's authority expires March 18 but would probably be extended on a permanent basis before that date. The agency said it hopes all states eventually will have the authority to grant their own permits.

EPA Regional Director Jerome Svore said the authority does not change the basic relationship between cities, industries and the state. In the past, the state has been expected to encourage cities to build sewage treatment facilities and crack down on industrial polluters.

Fine files for auditor in 1974

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The executive director of the Democratic state committee resigned Tuesday and filed for the Democratic nomination for state auditor in 1974.

Dwight L. Fine, 30, said, "I am entering the race early because I want to concentrate my efforts toward developing an effective statewide organization. In this way I feel I can be instrumental in helping rebuild the Democratic party."

Fine, the first candidate to file, pledged "an open, honest campaign that will not divide the Democratic party nor will it diminish the Democrats' opportunity to win in 1974."

He was the campaign coordinator for Edward L. Dowd, this year's Democratic gubernatorial candidate. Before that he was administrative assistant to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick for two years.

He started working for the state as a budget analyst in 1965 and for two years was executive assistant to the state director of revenue.

Fine is a native of Hopkins, in Nodaway County. He holds bachelor and master of arts degrees from Ouachita Baptist University at Arkadelphia, Ark. In 1970 he was the campaign manager for Hayes McClerkin in his bid for governor of Arkansas.

Fine also holds a master's degree in public administration from the University of Missouri - Columbia. He is married and has a 5-year- old son.

McGovern says bombing will stiffen VC resolve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern says President Nixon's renewed bombing of North Vietnam will lengthen the war and stiffen the enemy's resolve.

But Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, offered his own prescription for the air war: "bomb them all."

In a statement, McGovern said Monday that the Nixon administration "has chosen a course that can only keep our young men bogged down in an Asian jungle and our prisoners locked away in Asian cells for still another Christmas."

The South Dakota Democrat said, "It defies all reason to suggest that the North Vietnamese will abandon their cause now—after a generation of struggle—simply because we are bombing the North once again."

McGovern renewed the pleas of his unsuccessful presidential campaign for a firm withdrawal date, an end to the bombing and an end to military aid for South Vietnam.

Hebert found the bombing a key to ending the war. "Mine Haiphong harbor, bomb Hanoi, bomb them all," he said in a telephone interview. "We would never have got them (Hanoi) to the peace table in the first place if we hadn't bombed them."

The administration came in for criticism from the National League of Families of prisoners of war Monday.

"We trust that our country's spokesmen will refrain in the future from raising the hopes of the nation until a peace treaty has been firmly agreed upon," said the league in a statement.

The statement referred to presidential adviser Henry Kissinger's Oct. 26 statement that "peace is at hand" and his announcement Saturday that talks had stalled because an agreement acceptable to the President had not been reached.

U.S. wheat in Russia

ODESSA (AP) — Russian stevedores climbed aboard the American grain ship Ogden Willamette before dawn today and began unloading 26,000 tons of U.S. wheat bound for Soviet bakeries.

As a light snow fell on this Black Sea port, workmen connected 16 huge, pneumatic "evacuators" to the ship's holds. The American-made machines began blowing the wheat out of the ship's 15 compartments and into boxcars lined up on sidings.

"I'm very impressed; they're very efficient," said Edward Long of the 40 Russian workmen. Long is a representative of Ogden Marine Inc. of New York City, which owns the Ogden Willamette.

The tanker eased into her berth shortly after midnight after a 7,000-mile, 30-day trip from Houston, Tex. She is the first U.S. ship to arrive with part of the $2 billion worth of American grain purchased this year by the Soviet government.

Three more U.S. wheat ships are due in Odessa within the next few days.

Some of the American grain has already arrived on ships of other countries.

Viet talks compared

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here are the public positions of the North Vietnamese and Americans concerning the stalled Vietnam peace talks as stated Saturday by Henry A. Kissinger and Tuesday by Hanoi's No. 2 man in the negotiations, Xuan Thuy:

Why there isn't a cease-fire?

Thuy: The Americans demanded no less than 126 changes in the October draft, including "attempts to impose changes of substance which would have violated the fundamental rights of the people of Vietnam and the right of selfdetermination of the South Vietnamese."

Kissinger: "What remains on the agreement itself is a fundamental point. It is, however, a point that has been accepted already two weeks previously and later withdrawn, so we are not raising a new fundamental point. We are raising the acceptance of something that had already once been accepted."

South Vietnamese sovereignty?

Thuy: Washington is trying to "perpetuate the division of Vietnam" and deny the "reality" that two parallel administrations and armies and three political forces exist in South Vietnam.

Kissinger: "We wanted some reference in the agreement, however vague, however elusive, however indirect ... which would make clear that the two parts of Vietnam would live in peace with each other and that neither side would impose its solution on the other by force."

The cease-fire supervisory force:

Thuy: The Americans want to introduce thousands of military observers, "creating a foreign military army of occupation in defiance of Vietnamese sovereignty and contrary to the principles of the agreement."

Kissinger: "We had thought that an effective machinery required, in effect, some freedom of movement. And our estimate was that several thousand people were needed to monitor the many provisions of the agreement.

"The North Vietnamese perception is that the total force should be no more than 290 of which nearly half should be located at headquarters,

He had stayed behind to sign autographs, shake hands with fellow diplomats and thank them for the "fantastic" way he had been received during two years as top U.S. delegate.

Bush is leaving for Washington to become chairman of the Republican National Committee. John Scali, White House foreign policy consultant and former Associated Press and American Broadcasting Co. reporter, has been named to succeed him.

In his farewell speech to the Assembly, Bush said perhaps the 27th assembly was dull but probably this was because it "moved forward along the road that leads away from the sensational politics of confrontation and rhetoric toward the kind of mature diplomacy that seeks practical solutions to the problems of mankind."

The retiring president of the assembly, Deputy Foreign Minister Stanislaw Trepczynski of Poland, said it was "thanks to the new climate of detente" in the world that the sharp political, ideological and other differences among U.N. members were not able to hamper U.N. efforts to strengthen international cooperation.

While the Middle East dispute remained stalemated, some U.N. diplomats said it was a triumph of negotiations over confrontation that the assembly had not worsened it.

Through efforts of many Western, nonaligned and moderate Arab countries, the final Middle East resolution was toned down from its original draft version to the point that Israel dropped threats to renounce the 1967 U.N. formula for eventual settlement.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah was one of those who called the session the "Assembly on Terrorism" because terrorism was the major new issue, prompted by the massacre of Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics in September.

The United States and other Western powers were critical of the assembly for voting to limit antiterrorist efforts during the coming year to a study and rejecting treaty proposals.

George Washington referred to the nation's capital as the Federal City.

EPA gives ok to issue state waste discharge permits here

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Environmental Protection Agency officials announced Tuesday they have granted the state of Missouri authority to issue waste discharge permits, which must be obtained by cities, industries and agricultural concerns before they can discharge waste into navigable waters.

The EPA said Missouri's authority expires March 18 but would probably be extended on a permanent basis before that date. The agency said it hopes all states eventually will have the authority to grant their own permits.

EPA Regional Director Jerome Svore said the authority does not change the basic relationship between cities, industries and the state. In the past, the state has been expected to encourage cities to build sewage treatment facilities and crack down on industrial polluters.

Fine files for auditor in 1974

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The executive director of the Democratic state committee resigned Tuesday and filed for the Democratic nomination for state auditor in 1974.

Dwight L. Fine, 30, said, "I am entering the race early because I want to concentrate my efforts toward developing an effective statewide organization. In this way I feel I can be instrumental in helping rebuild the Democratic party."

Fine, the first candidate to file, pledged "an open, honest campaign that will not divide the Democratic party nor will it diminish the Democrats' opportunity to win in 1974."

He was the campaign coordinator for Edward L. Dowd, this year's Democratic gubernatorial candidate. Before that he was administrative assistant to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick for two years.

He started working for the state as a budget analyst in 1965 and for two years was executive assistant to the state director of revenue.

Fine is a native of Hopkins, in Nodaway County. He holds bachelor and master of arts degrees from Ouachita Baptist University at Arkadelphia, Ark. In 1970 he was the campaign manager for Hayes McClerkin in his bid for governor of Arkansas.

Fine also holds a master's degree in public administration from the University of Missouri - Columbia. He is married and has a 5-year- old son.

McGovern says bombing will stiffen VC resolve

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern says President Nixon's renewed bombing of North Vietnam will lengthen the war and stiffen the enemy's resolve.

But Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, offered his own prescription for the air war: "bomb them all."

In a statement, McGovern said Monday that the Nixon administration "has chosen a course that can only keep our young men bogged down in an Asian jungle and our prisoners locked away in Asian cells for still another Christmas."

The South Dakota Democrat said, "it defies all reason to suggest that the North Vietnamese will abandon their cause now—after a generation of struggle—simply because we are bombing the North once again."

McGovern renewed the pleas of his unsuccessful presidential campaign for a firm withdrawal date, an end to the bombing and an end to military aid for South Vietnam.

Hebert found the bombing a key to ending the war. "Mine Haiphong harbor, bomb Hanoi, bomb them all," he said in a telephone interview. "We would never have got them (Hanoi) to the peace table in the first place if we hadn't bombed them."

The administration came in for criticism from the National League of Families of prisoners of war Monday.

"We trust that our country's spokesmen will refrain in the future from raising the hopes of the nation until a peace treaty has been firmly agreed upon," said the league in a statement.

The statement referred to presidential adviser Henry Kissinger's Oct. 26 statement that "peace is at hand" and his announcement Saturday that talks had stalled because an agreement acceptable to the President had not been reached.

John P. Knox

COLUMBIA — Harry Stoeckle, M.D., of Columbia, president of the Missouri Heart Association has announced reappointment of John P. Knox Jr. as Missouri State Heart Fund chairman for 1973. This will be Mr. Knox's third year in the capacity.

Knox, even though a busy, full-time vice president of the School of the Ozarks in Point Lookout, indicated that he was happy to take some of his time to spearhead the Heart Fund drive in Missouri.

In accepting the post, he said, "Knowing the worthiness of the Heart Association's three-pronged mission of research, education and community services ...I feel honored to be again selected to serve as state Heart Fund chairman."

"Since its beginning, the American Heart Association has allocated at least half its income for research. Affiliates, like Missouri, allocate an average of 25 per cent of their income to hundreds of other research projects. Local support helps build an integrated national program that begins with promising young scientists and continues on to gifted investigators who make the study of cardiovascular diseases lifetime careers."

He continued, "Another major role is to bring new knowledge concerning cardiovascular advances to physicians and nurses so that patients everywhere may benefit. Its program of public education brings helpful knowledge to the public in all aspects of cardiovascular disease, emphasizing the early warning signs of heart attack and the dangers of ignoring these signs."

U.S. wheat in Russia

ODESSA (AP) — Russian stevedores climbed aboard the American grain ship Ogden Willamette before dawn today and began unloading 36,000 tons of U.S. wheat bound for Soviet bakeries.

As a light snow fell on this Black Sea port, workmen connected 16 huge, pneumatic "evacuators" to the ship's holds. The American-made machines began blowing the wheat out of the ship's 15 compartments and into boxcars lined up on sidings.

"I'm very impressed; they're very efficient," said Edward Long of the 40 Russian workmen. Long is a representative of Ogden Marine Inc. of New York City, which owns the Ogden Willamette.

The tanker eased into her berth shortly after midnight after a 7,000-mile, 30-day trip from Houston, Tex. She is the first U.S. ship to arrive with part of the $1 billion worth of American grain purchased this year by the Soviet government.

Three more U.S. wheat ships are due in Odessa within the next few days.

Some of the American grain has already arrived on ships of other countries.

Viet talks compared

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here are the public positions of the North Vietnamese and Americans concerning the stalled Vietnam peace talks as stated Saturday by Henry A. Kissinger and Tuesday by Hanoi's No. 2 man in the negotiations, Xuan Thuy:

Why there isn't a cease-fire?

Thuy: The Americans demanded no less than 126 changes in the October draft, including "attempts to impose changes of substance which would have violated the fundamental rights of the people of Vietnam and the right of self-determination of the South Vietnamese."

Kissinger: "What remains on the agreement itself is a fundamental point. It is, however, a point that has been accepted already two weeks previously and later withdrawn, so we are not raising a new fundamental point. We are raising the acceptance of something that has already once been accepted."

South Vietnamese sovereignty?

Thuy: Washington is trying to "perpetuate the division of Vietnam" and deny the "reality" that two parallel administrations and armies and three political forces exist in South Vietnam.

Kissinger: "We wanted some reference in the agreement, however vague, however elusive, however indirect ... which would make clear that the two parts of Vietnam would live in peace with each other and that neither side would impose its solution on the other by force."

The cease-fire supervisory force:

Thuy: The Americans want to introduce thousands of military observers, "creating a foreign military army of occupation in defiance of Vietnamese sovereignty and contrary to the principles of the agreement."

Kissinger: "We had thought that an effective machinery required, in effect, some freedom of movement. And our estimate was that several thousand people were needed to monitor the many provisions of the agreement.

"The North Vietnamese perception is that the total force should be no more than 250 of which nearly half should be located at headquarters,

Scientists' future looks down to earth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Faced with the last planned moon mission and prospects of peace, some American spaceindustry leaders are thinking of a more down-to-earth future.

There is talk of getting into rapid transit, health-care systems, designing computerized law-enforcement systems, communications and shipbuilding.

Most aerospace officials, however, resist the idea that the industry is in serious trouble. As industrialist David Packard notes, "It is rather ironic to be talking about an industry in deep trouble with an Apollo on the way to the moon today."

However, in California, the nation's leading aerospace state, more than 180,000 jobs have been eliminated since the industry's high of 616,000 jobs five years ago.

At a week-end conference here, called to examine the need for the aerospace industry to retool, most participants agreed in speeches and interviews that it will have to retool to some extent.

"We have, in effect, put to pasture an industry responsible for some of the most significant achievements in our history," Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., told 200 aerospace officials and economists at the conference called by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the National Association of Business Economists.

"In a time of growing public antagonism toward the war in Vietnam and the spiraling arms race, the government did too little, too late, to ward off the inevitable decline in an industry which since World War II has become a major component of our national economy."

Rocket scientist Wernher Von Braun, credited with helping develop Germany's World War II V2 rocket and America's Saturn rocket that boosted spacecraft to the moon, foresees the United States as resuming manned moon flights in 10 years.

"Space," he said, "is here to stay."

Packard, a former top Defense Department aide and now chairman of Hewlett-Packard Co. of Palo Alto, Calif., said that, despite the industry's obvious "severe problem," he is "not at all sure that this problem can be solved, or even alleviated for the industry, by trying to move into new-product and new-market areas."

Packard said his suggestion is for aerospace "to call a spade a spade and admit that the first priority of the aerospace industry is to get its house in order and not go charging into new fields."

He said he thought President Nixon will keep supporting spending for necessary defense levels. "At least in terms of current dollars, there will probably be no major decreases."

Persistent Salesmen Housewife's Pet Peeve

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with door-to-door salesmen who come to the door and keep bugging you and insisting on coming in the house to demonstrate their product even though you say you are not interested. One encyclopedia salesman did get in. When mother told him she thought the price was high he told her she cared nothing for her children so we had to almost kick the guy out.—DELORES

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Recently I bought a one-size-fits-all nylon body suit. After several washings the zipper puckered and got so stiff that it has ruined the clinging shape of the suit. I would appreciate some advice as to what I can do with this.—ALICE

DEAR POLLY--I think June could remove the perspiration odor from her foam rubber pillows and mattress by filling an empty window spray bottle with vinegar and LIGHTLY spraying the items to be deodorized and then letting them dry.—MRS. C. H. K.

DEAR POLLY—Like June's boys, mine are profusely sweaty sleepers and plastic mattress covers under the cotton sheets will protect the mattress but aggravate the sweating. When changing the boys' beds I spray the mattresses with an aerosol disinfectant and then let them air for a few hours. The foam rubber pillows can be washed in cold water at a gentle speed or by hand and bleach can be added to the first rinse to disinfect and deodorize. They will need a couple of rinsings. Sun will do as well as the bleach if they are air-dried.—HOLLY

DEAR GIRLS—The Cleanliness Bureau says when washing foam rubber pillows the machine should run only five minutes and also ONLY five minutes for each rinsing. To wash by hand, put the foam pillow (in a case, of course) in a deep tub full of warm water and enough detergent so suds stand up. Press pillow down and let spring back. Do this time and time again to push the suds through the pillow or use a plumber's plunger. When water gets dirty, remove the pillow. Repeat process. Rinse with plenty of clean water and squeeze out well with an up and down motion. Put between two bath towels and press down to blot out as much water as possible. DO NOT put foam rubber pillows in the dryer. Dry by fastening pillowcases with clothespins to an outside line in a breezy spot. This takes time DO not expect to use pillows that night.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Marble tops from old washstands make great pastry and breadboards. They are nice and cold for rolling out pie crusts.—IDELIA

"We have, in effect, put to pasture an industry responsible for some of the most significant achievements in our history," Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., told 200 aerospace officials and economists at the conference called by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the National Association of Business Economists.

"In a time of growing public antagonism toward the war in Vietnam and the spiraling arms race, the government did too little, too late, to ward off the inevitable decline in an industry which since World War II has become a major component of our national economy."

Rocket scientist Wernher Von Braun, credited with helping develop Germany's World War II V2 rocket and America's Saturn rocket that boosted spacecraft to the moon, foresees the United States as resuming manned moon flights in 10 years.

"Space," he said, "is here to stay."

Packard, a former top Defense Department aide and now chairman of Hewlett-Packard Co. of Palo Alto, Calif., said that, despite the industry's obvious "severe problem," he is "not at all sure that this problem can be solved, or even alleviated for the industry, by trying to move into new-product and new-market areas."

Packard said his suggestion is for aerospace "to call a spade a spade and admit that the first priority of the aerospace industry is to get its house in order and not go charging into new fields."

He said he thought President Nixon will keep supporting spending for necessary defense levels. "At least in terms of current dollars, there will probably be no major decreases."

POLLY'S POINTERS

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with door-to-door salesmen who come to the door and keep bugging you and insisting on coming in the house to demonstrate their product even though you say you are not interested. One encyclopedia salesman did get in. When mother told him she thought the price was high he told her she cared nothing for her children so we had to almost kick the guy out.—DELORES

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Recently I bought a one-size-fits-all nylon body suit. After several washings the zipper puckered and got so stiff that it has ruined the clinging shape of the suit. I would appreciate some advice as to what I can do with this.—ALICE

DEAR POLLY—I think June could remove the perspiration odor from her foam rubber pillows and mattress by filling an empty window spray bottle with vinegar and LIGHTLY spraying the items to be deodorized and then letting them dry.—MRS. C. H. K.

DEAR POLLY—Like June's boys, mine are profusely sweaty sleepers and plastic mattress covers under the cotton sheets will protect the mattress but aggravate the sweating. When changing the boys' beds I spray the mattresses with an aerosol disinfectant and then let them air for a few hours. The foam rubber pillows can be washed in cold water at a gentle speed or by hand and bleach can be added to the first rinse to disinfect and deodorize. They will need a couple of rinsings. Sun will do as well as the bleach if they are air-dried.—HOLLY

DEAR GIRLS—The Cleanliness Bureau says when washing foam rubber pillows the machine should run only five minutes and also ONLY five minutes for each rinsing. To wash by hand, put the foam pillow (in a case, of course) in a deep tub full of warm water and enough detergent so suds stand up. Press pillow down and let spring back. Do this time and time again to push the suds through the pillow or use a plumber's plunger. When water gets dirty, remove the pillow. Repeat process. Rinse with plenty of clean water and squeeze out well with an up and down motion. Put between two bath towels and press down to blot out as much water as possible. DO NOT put foam rubber pillows in the dryer. Dry by fastening pillowcases with clothespins to an outside line in a breezy spot. This takes time DO not expect to use pillows that night.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Marble tops from old washstands make great pastry and breadboards. They are nice and cold for rolling out pie crusts.—IDELIA

Alcatraz swim is successful

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A skinny Englishman who stays out late and doesn't watch his diet has swum the cold and treacherous mile from Alcatraz Island to San Francisco.

Kenneth F. Crutchlow, 28, said he didn't train, hadn't swam a stroke in three months, stays out late and "I drink and I eat everything I want. I consider myself a regular type guy, so this proves if you want to do something all you need is mental desire."

Crutchlow, 6 feet tall and weighing 154, braved vicious currents, 50-degree water and 38-degree air temperatures Sunday for the swim across the stretch that once helped keep some of history's toughest criminals on the former prison island.

He made it in 1 hour and 28 minutes, then collapsed on the shore near Fisherman's Wharf, unable to speak.

He later spent 20 minutes shivering in a sauna at 150 degrees, then sipped champagne.

Crutchlow wasn't the first to make the swim but probably was the only one to do it at the coldest time of the year. News reporters scurrying to interview him slipped on ice near the shore.

The plucky Briton, who set records walking and bicycling across Death Valley wearing a bowler hat, has put himself through dozens of other endurance tests and says he does it in part to keep in shape.

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Safety Council predicted today that 56,700 persons will be killed in traffic accidents in 1972, making the year the deadliest on record.

In making the projection based on 46,970 deaths for the first 10 months, a 4 per cent increase from last year, Howard Pyle, NSC president, said that two million persons will suffer disabling injuries in traffic mishaps and the cost to the national economy will be about $16 billion.

The previous deadliest year was 1969 when 56,000 persons were killed. The toll for 1971 was 54,700.

Contributing to the increased death rate, Pyle said, are:

—More drinking drivers, half of whom are involved in fatal accidents.

—A trend by states to lower the minimum drinking age to 18 an age at which youths are learning to drive as well as to drink.

—The bicycle boom with sale of 11.5 million in 1972 without necessary bicycle safety instructions.

Administration may create department of natural resources

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is actively considering creation of a department of natural resources by presidential executive order.

Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton, in a memorandum obtained by The Associated Press, has asked his top subordinates for recommendations aimed at solving problems involved in such an order.

Morton requested the recommendations by Dec. 15, but said he would review them before deciding whether to submit them to the White House.

Two years ago, despairing of getting major reorganization through an opposition Congress, President Nixon used an executive order to create the Environmental Protection Agency, transferring major programs from the Interior Department, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and other agencies.

Congress has failed to act on a series of Nixon proposals to reorganize the Cabinet including establishment of the department of natural resources (DNR).

As proposed, the department would incorporate all of the present Interior Department and would absorb the Forest Service from the Ariculture Department, civil construction activities from the Army Corps of Engineers, and civilian atomic-power development from the Atomic Energy Commission.

Since the Nov. 7 election, when Nixon won by a landslide and Democrats retained control of Congress, there have been growing indications that Nixon might seek to bypass Congress and carry out some of his reorganization plans by executive order.

The day after the election, the White House issued a memo demanding the resignations of all presidential appointees, to become effective "at the pleasure of the President," and many top officials have been dismissed.

The memo also asked each appointee to "put together a basic book about your current assignment," defining its proper course and its opportunities for improvement.

The project was to be completed by Dec. 15.

On Nov. 14, Morton added a memo of his own to his assistant secretaries and selected officials, explaining, "I would like to expand on this subject ...."

Morton asked them to detail:

"What specific problems in the DNR proposal will have to be resolved in order to implement a possible executive order?

"How do these problems affect your operation? What are your recommendations for resolution?"

Schmitz got 3,110 votes

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The American party candidates for president and vice president received 3,110 write-in votes, Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick sai today.

Kirkpatrick said the votes for American party presidential candidate John Schmitz and vice presidential candidate Thomas J. Anderson were delayed in counting because the voters failed to designate their electoral vote preference.

State law requires that on write-ins, voters must vote in the Republican or Democratic column and scratch out the presidential candidate in that column. That designates an alternative vote on presidential electors.

President Nixon carried the state by over 450,000 votes and received 12 electoral votes.

Kirkpatrick's revised estimate showed 1,855,y91 persons voted in Missouri, compared with his pre-election forecast of 1,975,000.

Kirkpatrick counted 206 write-in ballots for Schmitz and Anderson as being electoral votes for Nixon because they were cast in the GOP column.

"The 1,384 voters who scratched out McGovern-Shriver and wrote in Schmitz-Anderson must likewise be counted for the Democratic electors and recorded for McGovern-Shriver," he said.

"We need to either eliminate write-in votes for president or simplify the process so the result truly represents the wishes of the voters," Kirkpatrick said.

'Don't Mess with Jim'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — For Jim Croce, success means saying goodbye to the days when he ducked away from flying barstools, popped pills called "West Coast Turnarounds" and cringed from the pain of his jackhammercramped hands.

Somehow, there's no way anyone could seriously question whether Cross has paid his socalled dues. It's all too obvious that he has. His songs let you know more than anything else.

Croce, 29, is bounding up the ladder of musical success after nearly a decade of passing the hat and hitting the road. His two most widely recognized songs are "Operator" and "'don't Mess with Jim."

On stage, he comes across with down-to-earth songs, some sad and other comical. And his flexible style of entertainment is, perhaps, his greatest asset — for he sings with a lyrical story-telling style that nearly everyone identifies with because of its appeal to basic emotions.

"I try to approach my songs so others can say they've had that kind of experience too," said Croce, who was raised in South Philadelphia and became a disc jockey before embarking on a musical career.

The thing that Croce is concentrating on more than anything else is improving his already-accomplished style of guitar picking.

"Right now I'm tinkering around with the guitar and trying to become a better player. I listen to Jerry Reid all day and all night. He's unbelievable."

"Between the jackhammers and the steering wheels, my hands have stiffened up," he said of the kind of rugged truck driving and construction work he was doing only a year ago.

Croce likes to recall for his audiences the days when he barreled down the highways in huge freight trucks trying to keep awake on pep pills.

"They're called 'West Coast Turnarounds,'" he said, "because after you're through driving from Orlando to San Diego you just pop another one in your mouth and turn around to head back. It gets kinda wired though when you begin having conversation with your windshield."

Croce's life is a mixed bag if ever there was one. He has a degree in psychology, worked for the State Department on a Mideast cultural exchange program and used to write "jive" radio commercials.

"You know the kind," he said. "They go something like this: 'Alright all you heavy cats out there, we're gonna get down and do it funky right tonight so lay back and let us lay some of that heavy jive music on ya'll man."

Though Croce's style borders on country-folk, he's quick to point out that "I grew up listening to country music and a lot of the old-time Jimmy Rodgers stuff. The first groups I played in were bluegrass."

The list of his most respected performers is as varied as his lifestyle. It ranges from classical guitarist Christopher Parkening to the old-time music of Fats Domino.

"Good-time funky music is the stuff I love — stuff like the Coasters and Fats did and stuff that Jerry Reid and Merle Haggard are doing."

His home, at present, is a rented farmhouse in Wagontown, Pa., "When I go back home," he said, "I like to stop in at the old bars and hangouts."

"It's not a dues paying scene," he added somewhat apologetically. "Rather, it's something I did then and still like to do now.

"Whether sitting at a bar or out of work, I've had a chance to sort things out in my head and with my songs. That way I know where my musical direction is coming from."

"It isn't magic," he said of his songwriting style. "It's just sitting down and trying to say something."

If the public knew what was going on in hospitals and how much they are gouging, they'd be outraged. —Herbert S. Denenberg, Pennsylvania Insurance Commission.

Kennedy cronies write memoir of JFK years

NEW YORK (AP) — John Kennedy barking vocal exercises in the bathtub, seeking companionship on lonely evenings in the White House, pausing to write a note of encouragement to the mother of a badly burned child on the day his infant son died — these are the images of the late president in a new book written by two close friends.

David F. Powers and Kenneth P. O'Donnell, beer-drinking political buddies of long standing and White House confidants of John F. Kennedy, spent eight months after his assassination recording on tape their memories of Kennedy.

Those tapes are now a book, "Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye," an affectionate, personal remembrance produced with the help of writer Joe McCarthy.

O'Donnell reports one conversation, occasioned by the doubts he voiced concerning Kennedy's choice of Lyndon B. Johnson as his running mate in 1960.

"He said something to me that I am always going to remember: 'Get one thing clear, Kenny, I'm 43 years old, and I'm the healthiest candidate for president in the country, and I'm not going to die in office.'"

During the 1960 presidential campaign, the authors report, Kennedy did vocal exercises to preserve his voice. One of those exercises called for him to bark like a dog for 30 minutes every morning. Kennedy took to doing this in the bathtub.

"The first time that we heard the strange animal sounds coming from the bathroom, Dave (Powers) opened the door to see what was happening. Kennedy looked at him from the tub, embarrassed. 'I heard a funny noise,' Dave said, 'and I thought there was a seal in the tub.' For the next few weeks we had to make up excuses when an early morning visitor at our hotel room asked what was going on in the bathroom."

What the authors add to the already considerable Kennedy literature is a personal view only close pals could have. He cursed occasionally, liked sports, was entranced by celebrities, and remembered others even at moments of personal travail.

Awakened early one morning because the baby's condition was worse, Kennedy, while waiting for an elevator, saw a child who had been severely burned. He asked the mother's name, Powers said, then wrote a note of sympathy and encouragement to her.

Two hours later, the Kennedy baby died. Powers was with the president. "He went upstairs to the room where he had been sleeping, sat on the bed and wept."

Powers, now 60 and administrative officer of the Kennedy Memorial Library, met Kennedy when Kennedy first ran for public office in a 1946 congressional contest. Although he never held an official title, Powers was a man Kennedy liked to have near him. He swam with Kennedy almost daily in the White House pool and stayed with the president on evenings when Jacqueline Kennedy was away from the White House.

"Dave was accustomed to being summoned for night duty at the White House when Jackie was absent," the book relates. "He called himself 'John's other wife.' The president hated to be alone in the evening.

"Around 11 o'clock, the president would get undressed and slip into the short-length Brooks Bros. sleeping jacket that he wore in preference to pajamas. Dave would watch him kneel beside his bed and say his prayers. Then he would get into the bed, and say to Dave, 'Good night, pal, will you please put out the light?'"

O'Donnell, 48, has been part of the Kennedy entourage since Kennedy's first U.S. Senate race in 1952. He was a trusted political aide during Kennedy's years in the Senate and became his appointment secretary and special assistant in the White House.

Power and O'Donnell were with Kennedy when he traveled through Ireland in the summer of 1963, four months before he died.

Of New HEW Chief

Weinberger 'Will Do Us All Good'

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)

"He cut the FTC (Federal Trade Commission) to shreds. But it came out a much better agency. He'll question every budget item at Health Education and Welfare, including sacrosanct Social Security and make the proponents justify every last dollar. It won't be enough to take a $12 billion program, ask for $200 million more, and say that increase is only a drop in the bucket. He'll want to go back to zero budgeting and ask for a justification for last year's $12 billion that everyone had been accepting as the base."

The conversation, not meant to be overheard, was, of course about Caspar Weinberger, President Nixon's new appointee as head of that monster agency, HEW, now the largest spender in the federal government, larger even than Defense.

The two bureaucrats ended their conversation by agreeing that Weinberger was the man for the job. This sort of hard-nosed checking, they observed, "will do us all good."

HEW is apparently an area where both President Nixon and some of his major opponents, liberal and conservative seem to agree in some measure. Mr. Nixon, and his critics as well, have attacked the ineffective manner in which welfare and other major HEW programs have been carried out in the past, and the present as well.

A White House aide once described assistance to one Indian tribe on which this government spent an average of $8,000 per family a year. With only slight literary license, the aide said the $8,000 goes to the bureaucrats, of which there is one per family and he is doing all right. But nothing is happening to the Indian families. They are more dependent after a century than they were when this all began.

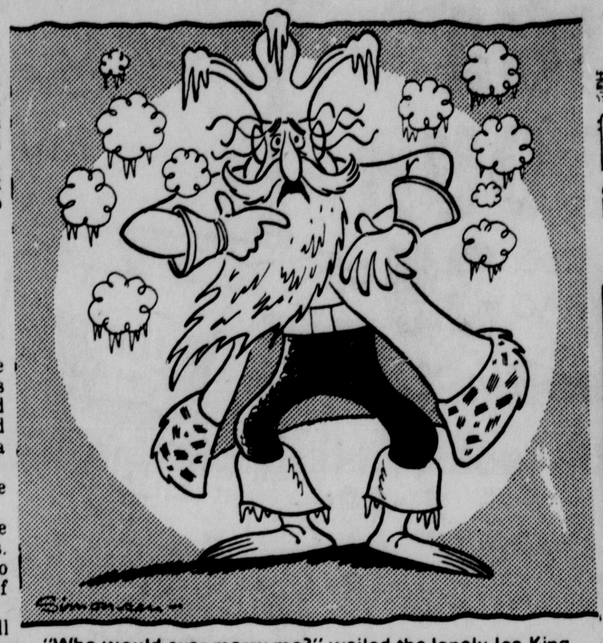
The Weinberger appointment is part and parcel of Mr. Nixon's attempt to get the federal government out of what it does worst—running local programs—and get the Washington agencies into what he believes the federal government does best, collecting and distributing cash, assigning to the states and cities more of the control and local decision making in nationwide programs.

As one paper passed around the White House in the early days of the administration phrased it, local governments can be flexible in administration. They can respond to local custom. They can experiment without being intimidated by the danger of collossal failure. They can also, in Mr. Nixon's mind, be more personal and therefore more human.

Santa and the ICE KING

by Lucrece Beale

SYNOPSIS: Oonik and Santa have finally found the Ice King, busily grinding out harsh winter storms from his fearful ice castle. When Santa explained that he and Oonik had come as friends, the Ice King stopped his work and suddenly burst into tears.



"Who would ever marry me?" wailed the lonely Ice King.

CHAPTER TWELVE
THE ICE KING'S STORY

Oonik marveled to see the Ice King cry. Even the King's tears were made of ice. They rained from his cheeks and clattered to the floor like hailstones on a roof.

"What is it? What is the matter?" cried Santa in alarm.

"Nothing," replied the Ice King kicking away the tears. "It's just that you're the first to ever come here and call himself friend."

Then he told Santa how all his life he had lived alone in his frozen castle where not even a servant would live. How no one ever came to call. How he had no friends and everyone in the whole world hated him because he was Winter itself and brought everyone cold and misery.

"But you are wrong!" protested Santa. "Winter has its proper place. Children love snow and animals love to hibernate and even grownups love to sit before their fires on stormy nights."

The King's face brightened. "Do they really like me?" he asked.

"Of course they do," replied Santa.

"But now," went on Santa sternly, "it is August. For four months the world has waited for spring and summer but still you send your ice and snow and frigid winds. That is wrong. Why do you do it?"

"It's because I am so lonely!" burst out the Ice King. "All winter I can keep busy making storms but in summertime there's nothing to do but sit and mope. So this year I decided I would just keep on making winter forever and that way I'll always be busy and happy too."

Santa shook his head sadly. "And so the whole world will freeze and starve."

The Ice King hung his head and walked away. "I thought since they hated me anyway I might as well be really hateful," he mumbled.

Santa took out his pipe and lit it. For a long while he smoked in silence and then he said, "You must get a wife."

"What?" cried the Ice King turning to stare.

"A wife. You must get a wife to love you and care for you and keep you from being lonely or feeling hateful again."

"A wife!" whispered the Ice King and his eyes softened and he began to smile. Then his face clouded over and he burst out bitterly, "Who would ever marry me?"

"There are lonely maidens in the world just as there are lonely men," said Santa. "The trick is to get them together. I have in mind for you a beautiful creature whom I happen to know is in a marrying mood."

"Who?" said the Ice King eagerly.

"The Sun Daughter," said Santa. "She dwells in the East where the sun rises each day." He paused and scratched his head. "Ah," he sighed. "If only I had my reindeer back we could travel there in a single day!"

"I can get the reindeer," he said.

Santa shook his head. "No, my boy, I turned them loose, you remember, and they are far away now hunting for the summer food they could not find up here."

"I am a good reindeer hunter," Oonik bragged. "My father taught me well."

"But even your father has not been able to find any reindeer this summer," said Santa.

"I will not find just any reindeer," insisted Oonik, "I will find your reindeer."

"But how can you?" cried Santa, "when I have turned them free?"

"Because," said Oonik with a smile, "they have followed you here, all the way."

Evolution, religion clash again in texts

STANFORD, Calif. (AP)— Don't put Adam and Eve and the Garden of Eden on the same level as Darwin's theory of evolution, 19 Nobel laureates are pleading with the California Board of Education.

In a letter to the board Monday, the California scientists revived again the 113-year- old controversy begun when Charles Darwin published his theory of man's origin. The board is scheduled to select new science textbooks Thursday, and the subject of man's origin may get a revised treatment.

"Creation 'theory' is not based on science and does not belong in a science textbook." wrote the Nobel Prize winners, adding their prestige to a list including the National Academy of Science and a half-dozen other professional societies.

Religious fundamentalists want the Biblical version of the origin of life placed side by side with Darwin in the new science textbooks the board will select this week.

The scientists want only evolution discussed in science textbooks, arguing it is the sole scientific explanation of life's origins generally accepted in the world.

California cops using guns to shoot speeders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The motorcycle policeman raised what looked like a gun and pulled the trigger as the motorist sped by on the curve.

The driver saw the officer and hastily slowed down. But it was too late. He was 15 miles over the limit — and it was recorded on the scope of the hand- held Digital Doppler, a new tool police are using to catch speeders.

A nine- mile stretch of Sunset Boulevard from Beverly Hills to the Pacific Ocean is patrolled by motorcycle officers using the instrument, which looks like a comic strip ray gun.

The police purchased eight of the devices — also known as "speed guns" — for about $700 each. They have been used on Sunset for three months because conventional speed detection systems are impractical there.

"The winding curves on Sunset endanger officers engaged in lengthy pursuits to clock and catch speeders," said Sgt. Gary C. Hall.

The detectors transmits a radio beam. It strikes a moving vehicle, bounces back to the gun and goes into a portable computer connected to the gun. The vehicle's speed is instantaneously registered in figures on the scope at the back of the gun.

GRANDVIEW, Mo. (AP) — Roy Scroggins was asleep, at peace with the world, when his three- year- old son shook him awake.

"Dad, there's a horse upstairs."

Mirazah, an 800-pound Arabian gelding, had somehow climbed the stairs of the house that Scroggins had converted into a barn in the front yard, and now stood staring out a paneless window.

"We made two stalls in the living room and two in the kitchen ... our horses eat out of the kitchen sink, explained Mrs. Scroggins. "Upstairs were the bedrooms and we stored hay up there."

No one knew how Mirazah had managed to turn a sharp corner in the living room and climb the 12 steep, narrow steps. And no one knew how to get him down.

Several neighbors and the Scroggins family trooped to the barn and discussed ways of luring the 17- year - old animal down.

"They're more trouble than the kids," Mrs. Scroggins said of the family's seven horses. "I think I'd rather have a houseful of children."

But Mirazah had one more surprise. As Scroggins attached a rope to his halter, the horse gingerly backed downstairs.

"He's not too smart, he got up there in the first place," said Scroggins.

Then everyone went back to bed.

What's the law?

The case of the independent girl

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

When a girl starts calling a boy by his first name, it's really his last name that she's after. But in Emma's case it was different. A women's libber, when she got married she insisted that her husband first sign an agreement permitting her to continue to use and be known by her maiden name.

And while her understanding husband offered no objection, the same could not be said for the authorities. In fact, they refused to permit her to register to vote unless she did so under her married name.

"You can complain all you want about a male- dominated society," she was told, "but if you want to register, you're going to have to do it our way. Because, like it or not, when you got married, your husband's name became your name. That's traditon, custom and the way the cookie crumbles."

"That's what you say," was Emma's answer. "But the fact is I've been using my maiden name for the past two years that I've been married and everybody knows me by that name. What's more, I intend to vote under that name and no male Chauvinist bully can stop me."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the independent Emma to use her maiden name to register?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that in the absence of a statute to the contrary and provided no fraud is intended, a person may adopt any name he or she may choose to use. While a married woman may choose to adopt the surname of her husband-- this being the long- standing custom and tradition that has resulted in the vast majority of married women adopting their husband's surnames as their own-- the mere fact of the marriage does not, as a matter of law, operate to establish the custom and tradition of the majority as a rule of law binding upon all.

Enclosed is clipping from the News Observer of the New Madrid Baptist Church written by the pastor, the Rev. Edward E. Wolfe. Would appreciate it being published in the MAIL BOX column.

PERSONALLY ...
from the Pastor's Study —

Tragedy has once again struck our community. One young man is dead, another is critically wounded and the doctors are having to fight for his life. At the present it is not publicly known what the circumstances involved really are. The fact remains that this is such a tragic waste of precious human resources. Whatever the causes, the whole community is involved, whether we want to be or not.

Our hearts go out in compassion and in Christian caring for the families. Our earnest prayers go to God for the recovery of Randy Krebs. There is not a person in this community who can say that such a thing could never happen in their family.

It is the hope and expectation of all that those responsible for learning "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth" shall be able to do so quickly and completely. Good citizenship involves being co- operative and helpful to the duly elected law enforcement officials. We should pray that they shall have Divine guidance in pursuing any investigation required to learn the truth about this violent act.

Much has been said about "Law and Order" in the last few years. "Law and Order" is not merely a matter of good police work and effective law enforcement by those charged by the community to maintain it. "Law and Order" begins at home — at the cradle. Until, and unless, there is strong, positive moral and spiritual teaching by parents to their children, crime, violence, and the paralyzing fears that accompany these will continue to rise. Without parental example in the home and community our youth will not respect themselves and others.

Every other institution in a community must undergird the home in this superhuman task of moral and spiritual education. The school and the church must stand along side the home giving full support and encouragement. Moral and spiritual values can be taught without divisive secretarian overtones which are destructive by their very nature.

The youth of any community need to see some "shining examples" of moral uprightness in the adults about them. Basic to the so- called "youth rebellion" is the hypocrisy, seen in so many adults, of a double- standard of morality.

Some time ago I was requested to serve as the Chairman of the New Madrid Community Betterment Program. I agreed to do so because I felt I might make some positive contributions in this direction. I am firmly convinced we need to provide more than the things we can buy with money for our young people. At the heart of all betterment is the necessity for better people. I believe this is really the heart- cry of the good people of this community. I have confidence in the people of this community to want this kind of community improvement, as well as better streets, buildings, parks, recreational facilities, schools, and homes in which to live and work.

The Rev. Edward E. Wolfe,
Pastor

Dear Editor:

Is something radically wrong with our educational system? Despite public financial support, amounting to an increase of nearly 800% since 1950, the system is producing 800,000 dropouts yearly, plus 35,000,000 functionally illiterate adults.

The politicians' shrill, tiresome plea for more money (to get votes for themselves) will not cure the problem. The dismal failure of the Educational System calls for a complete overhaul and housecleaning, hopefully producing more vocational training and more literate graduates who will be employable and thus reduce the welfare rolls.

And while her understanding husband offered no objection, the same could not be said for the authorities. In fact, they refused to permit her to register to vote unless she did so under her married name.

"You can complain all you want about a male- dominated society," she was told, "but if you want to register, you're going to have to do it our way. Because, like it or not, when you got married, your husband's name became your name. That's traditon, custom and the way the cookie crumbles."

"That's what you say," was Emma's answer. "But the fact is I've been using my maiden name for the past two years that I've been married and everybody knows me by that name. What's more, I intend to vote under that name and no male Chauvinist bully can stop me."

The dispute ended up in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the independent Emma to use her maiden name to register?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that in the absence of a statute to the contrary and provided no fraud is intended, a person may adopt any name he or she may choose to use. While a married woman may choose to adopt the surname of her husband-- this being the long- standing custom and tradition that has resulted in the vast majority of married women adopting their husband's surnames as their own-- the mere fact of the marriage does not, as a matter of law, operate to establish the custom and tradition of the majority as a rule of law binding upon all.

Enclosed is clipping from the News Observer of the New Madrid Baptist Church written by the pastor, the Rev. Edward E. Wolfe. Would appreciate it being published in the MAIL BOX column.

PERSONALLY ...
from the Pastor's Study —

Tragedy has once again struck our community. One young man is dead, another is critically wounded and the doctors are having to fight for his life. At the present it is not publicly known what the circumstances involved really are. The fact remains that this is such a tragic waste of precious human resources. Whatever the causes, the whole community is involved, whether we want to be or not.

Our hearts go out in compassion and in Christian caring for the families. Our earnest prayers go to God for the recovery of Randy Krebs. There is not a person in this community who can say that such a thing could never happen in their family.

It is the hope and expectation of all that those responsible for learning "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth" shall be able to do so quickly and completely. Good citizenship involves being co- operative and helpful to the duly elected law enforcement officials. We should pray that they shall have Divine guidance in pursuing any investigation required to learn the truth about this violent act.

Much has been said about "Law and Order" in the last few years. "Law and Order" is not merely a matter of good police work and effective law enforcement by those charged by the community to maintain it. "Law and Order" begins at home — at the cradle. Until, and unless, there is strong, positive moral and spiritual teaching by parents to their children, crime, violence, and the paralyzing fears that accompany these will continue to rise. Without parental example in the home and community our youth will not respect themselves and others.

Every other institution in a community must undergird the home in this superhuman task of moral and spiritual education. The school and the church must stand along side the home giving full support and encouragement. Moral and spiritual values can be taught without divisive secretarian overtones which are destructive by their very nature.

The youth of any community need to see some "shining examples" of moral uprightness in the adults about them. Basic to the so- called "youth rebellion" is the hypocrisy, seen in so many adults, of a double- standard of morality.

Some time ago I was requested to serve as the Chairman of the New Madrid Community Betterment Program. I agreed to do so because I felt I might make some positive contributions in this direction. I am firmly convinced we need to provide more than the things we can buy with money for our young people. At the heart of all betterment is the necessity for better people. I believe this is really the heart- cry of the good people of this community. I have confidence in the people of this community to want this kind of community improvement, as well as better streets, buildings, parks, recreational facilities, schools, and homes in which to live and work.

The Rev. Edward E. Wolfe,
Pastor

Dear Editor:

Is something radically wrong with our educational system? Despite public financial support, amounting to an increase of nearly 800% since 1950, the system is producing 800,000 dropouts yearly, plus 35,000,000 functionally illiterate adults.

The politicians' shrill, tiresome plea for more money (to get votes for themselves) will not cure the problem. The dismal failure of the Educational System calls for a complete overhaul and housecleaning, hopefully producing more vocational training and more literate graduates who will be employable and thus reduce the welfare rolls.

COOKING-UP with Donna Satterfield

'Twas the week before Christmas ...

I guess everyone is busy, busy, busy baking and planning for the holidays.

I went home last weekend and my mom had to rap my knuckles to keep me from eating all her cookie- dough. I'll get back at her Christmas day when I eat all her cookies.

Ron served a great turkey on Thanksgiving Day and, although I haven't tried his Cornish hen, he says it's really good. He goes for mushrooms, too.

Keep sending recipes and have a Merry Christmas. Bon Appetit!

ROCK CORNISH GAME HENS WITH BREAD STUFFING

1/2 cup melted butter
Salt and pepper to taste
Celery and mushroom dressing*

Preheat broiler. Line broiler pan with aluminum foil. Arrange hens, breast down, on pan; brush with butter. Season with salt or pepper. Broil six to seven inches from heat for 12 to 15 minutes, or until golden.

Remove from pan; fill each hen with bread stuffing. Replace hens, breast up, on pan; brush with remaining butter. Broil six to seven inches from heat for 10 to 12 inches, or until golden.

Serves 8

*CELERY AND MUSHROOM DRESSING

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 cups finely chopped celery
4 cups finely chopped mushrooms
2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon rosemary
1/2 teaspoon thyme
1/8 teaspoon pepper
2/3 cup sliced water chestnuts

Melt butter or margarine in large skillet; add celery, mushrooms, salt, rosemary, thyme and pepper; saute over low heat for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

4 14-ounce Rock Cornish game hens (reserve giblets)
Salt
2 cups cooked wild rice
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
1/2 cup chopped onions
1 egg
1 cup red wine
1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup lemon juice
1/2 cup melted butter
2 tablespoons soy sauce

Serves 4

MUSHROOMS ROYALE

1 pound medium mushrooms (about 3 dozen)
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup finely chopped green pepper
1/4 cup fine chopped onion
1 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon thyme
1/4 teaspoon turmeric
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Wash, trim and dry mushrooms thoroughly. Remove stems; finely chop enough stems to measure 1/3 cup.

Melt three tablespoons butter in skillet. Cook and stir chopped mushroom stems, green pepper and onion in butter about five minutes or until tender. Remove from heat; stir in remaining ingredients except mushroom caps and one tablespoon butter.

Melt one tablespoon butter in shallow baking dish. Fill mushroom caps with stuffing mixture; place mushrooms filled side up in baking dish. Bake 15 minutes.

Set oven control at broil or at 550 degrees. Broil mushrooms three to four inches from heat from two minutes. Makes three dozen appetizers.

APRICOT SHORTCAKE BARS

1 cup butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup granulated sugar
1 1/2 cups unsifted flour
3 eggs
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1 teaspoon lemond rind
1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
1 cup finely diced dried apricots
1/2 cup toasted blanched slivered almonds
1/4 cup red glace cherries, quartered

To prepare bottom layer for bars, in a medium mixing bowl cream butter, salt and granulated sugar; beat in flour, mixing thoroughly. Spread mixture evenly with a small metal spatula over bottom of buttered 13 by 9 by 2 inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350- degree oven until edges start to brown -- 25 minutes.

Meanwhile prepare topping. In medium mixing bowl beat together until well mixed the eggs, ginger, lemon rind and brown sugar. Stir in apricots, almonds and cherries. Spoon topping over partially baked layer in pan. Return to the 350-degree oven until topping is set -- 25 minutes. Cool thoroughly. Cut into bars. Slide small metal spatula under each bar before removing from pan to prevent sticking.

Astronaut fruitcake

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Apollo 17 astronauts have been eating their own special fruitcake during man's last planned flight to and from the moon. You might want to put it on your Christmas surprise menu.

At the request of The Associated Press, U. S. Army Laboratories at Natick, Mass., scale down the recipe for "Astronaut Fruitcake" and tested it for baking in home kitchens.

The following recipe will yield about two pounds. It may be baked in ten 3-ounce sizes or in two 1-pound coffee cans.

2-3 cup sifted cake flour
½ cup plus 3 tablespoons soy flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¾ cup sugar
5 tablespoons shortening
1 extra large egg
1½ tablespoons water
1 cup light raisins
½ cup halves candied cherries
1-3 cup candied pineapple in ½ -inch dices
1 cup pecan pieces

Mix and sift together flours, salt, baking powder and spices. Set aside. Cream sugar and shortening together thoroughly. Add egg to creamed mixture and mix thoroughly. Blend in dry ingredients and water. Fold fruit and nuts into batter, mix until evenly distributed.

To form each 3- ounce cakes, place ½ cup batter on 12-inch square of heavy duty foil, or a double thickness of regular foil. Flatten batter to depth of ¾ inch. Fold sides around cake batter, then fold up edges of foil so batter is tightly wrapped and will not lose moisture during baking. Bake 1 hour at 300 degrees F. Allow to cool thoroughly - preferably over - night - before unwrapping and serving.

Two 1- pound cakes may be made by placing half the batter in each of two 1-pound coffee cans. Cover top of can with foil and crimp edges to form seal. Bake upright in a pan of water in 300 degree F oven for 3½ hours. Be sure the foil does not touch the water in the pan, as it may draw up water into the cake during the baking.

Coffee Corner by Cherie

I have gained five pounds in the last two or three weeks and am I ever unhappy about it. When you're only 5'3" to start with and you've obviously quit growing up then the only place an additional five pounds can go is out, and brother, I'm literally "busting out" all over! Why is it everyone harps about staying thin and bad things like cholesteral count and all, and yet nobody ever serves skinny food when you go anyplace (what's really bad is I don't find myself serving skinny food at home either). How on earth is one expected to keep thin when all I've had trip between my teeth and down my little red gullet are goodies like homemade candies, cakes, cookies, eggnog, rich dips and cheese logs, and oh, boy are the hunger pangs ever attacking my stomach again. I'm probably gaining weight just sitting here writing about all these calories! You know, it wouldn't be so bad if I'd eat until I was full and stop, but I have this horrible tongue that just keeps urging me to sin again and again — I honestly think my tongue is a sugar addict.

Also, everyone stops me and asks when am I going to bring them some of my Christmas candy, and have you ever tried making candy without dipping your finger in for a taste at intervals (in the first place it wouldn't turn out any good cause I think all that finger dipping and tasting is what adds to the flavor of the candy anyway! Oh well, I am going to be strong and just eat grapefruit (blagh) till after the holidays and my shape is back to normal. I mean if I waited till after Christmas to go on a diet like Charles does I'd never get all that extra weight off, and what do you want to bet me ole Charles doesn't either?

Despite material progress, human life has never had a greater sense of insecurity than it is experiencing today.

Reminiscences on Truman, His Years

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA)

Personal reminiscences of Harry Truman seem inevitably to well up at this time, and I have my share.

On March 17, 1945, he came to Chicago for a St. Patrick's day speech. A morning press conference was called for the vice-president, and fewer than 10 reporters appeared.

It was an embarrassing, painful hour. We seemed to sense that President Roosevelt had not cued him in on big events, and we could think of little to ask him. There were odd silences between questions. One of the "tough" queries I posed was:

"How do you like your job?"

Less than a month later, FDR died and Truman had the weight of a world at war on his shoulders.

Even as the shock of Roosevelt's death was still spreading, I went to Kansas City and Independence, Mo., to talk to people who had known Truman in his earlier years. I found that his friends were legion. And, astonishingly in the light of later history, they forecast almost perfectly what kind of president he would be.

Most of those I saw had been his battery mates when he was an artillery captain in World War I. They testified to his strength and courage. One telling me how Truman had rallied his men when they were about to panic under enemy fire. Without exception they saw in him high qualities of leadership, and they insisted these were not weakened by the fact he served as a father-confessor to many of his men.

After the war, they stayed bound together. Truman was still their friend and helper, and they remembered him as a man of great personal honor. Somewhere around 1930 he paid off the last dollar of debt he owed after his little haberdashery store failed in 1921.

He was properly described as incorruptible, though his modest political start was given him by the ill-starred Tom Pendergast machine in Kansas City. Investigations always found Truman clean.

Serving as a county judge (supervisor), he asked Pendergast to slate him for something a bit better, like assessor. The old boss shook his head and said:

"No, I have something else in mind for you."

"What?" asked Truman.

Then Pendergast stunned him by answering simply: "The United States Senate."

Truman was nominated and elected, and began the rise that took him to the White House. Six years later, Pendergast was in jail and Truman, fighting alone with almost no money, doggedly pounded through Missouri to win renomination by a bare 7,000 votes. It was a forecast of the spirit which carried him to an upset presidential victory in 1948.

A lover of history but a plodding student (so one of his teachers told me), he had to labor valiantly to master the presidency when its load fell upon him.

Says his old friend and aide, Clark Clifford:

"When I'd go to him at night in his White House study, he'd be sitting there, wearing a green eyeshade, poring over a great pile of documents. My heart went out to him."

Margaret Truman Daniel has it right. Her father never wanted the vice-presidency. About to be chosen in 1944, he called his old friend Tom Evans and said: "Come on over here to Chicago and help keep me from being nominated." But the history he loved had its way.

Nature's Energy

The energy of a single tornado has been estimated at a hundred million kilowatts, or one-third as much as the total electrical generating capacity in the United States.

Ethiopia's nomadic Danakil tribesmen build mobile homes using brushwood, goatskins and straw mats. When water and forage run short, a family simply bundles the collapsible shelter onto a camel and moves on.

Vitamin proposal exposes dangers

NEW YORK (AP)— The word vitamin comes from a Latin word, vita, for life itself, and indeed vitamins are of vital importance to growth and health. But, like many of the other things in life, they are surrounded by controversy, myth and misuse.

The misuse came into the news in recent days when the federal Food and Drug Administration proposed to restrict the potentially dangerous use of vitamins A and D in some treatments.

The problem with vitamins A and D illustrates the approach to vitamins taken by many people and cited repeatedly by scientists: "If these vitamins are good for me, even vital, then why won't more of the vitamins be even better?"

In the case of A and D, the answer is simple: It has been proven that excessive or massive doeses actually can be harmful. Part of the problem with these vitamins is that the body tends to store them.

Further, according to one expert, there is very little evidence available on the effects of massive doses of any vitamin. There is little evidence available of the effects of massive doses over a long period of time- of what the cumulative effect might be.

The classic example of vitamin controversy is the contention by the two- time Nobel prize winner, Dr. Linus Pauling, that a lot of vicamin C can protect against, and fight, the common cold.

Other claims for vitamins include those for vitamin E, which is enjoying a relatively new popularity. Vitamin E, the claims run, can do many things, such as ward off heart disease and increase sexual potency. These claims are widely discounted by vitamin experts.

There are some who believe vitamins play a role in the treatment of mental illness. Dr. Pauling has coined the term "orthomolecular psychiatry," a method of treating mental illness by correcting the balance of vitamins and other natural substances in the body.

This approach to mental illness, however, is regarded with great skepticism by many scientists.

Because vitamins are found in small quantities in almost all foods, a well balanced diet is of great importance in maintaining good health. Indeed, it is said repeatedly, that a well balanced daily diet is sufficient to maintain normal health.

But it has also been pointed out that there are millions of Americans whose diet is a disaster due to poor eating habits or poverty or other factors.

The soda- pop and potato-chip emphasis in the diet of many teen- agers, regardless of economic level, has been cited many times. And others, such as pregnant women, must pay special attention to their diet. A physician's advice is necessary in many cases.

In addition to inadequate diets, there are vitamin problems caused by the failure of the body, in some individuals, to absorb nutrients properly. Some people require more than the average, some less.

The Food and Drug Administration's proposals on vitamins A and D do not concern these problems, but those of overdose. The agency said overdoses of vitamin A can cause various complications, ranging from growth retardation in children to headaches and cracked skin. The possible complications from vitamin D overdoses range from high blood pressure to kidney failure and death.

"Widespread promotion of both vitamins has resulted in "excessive use for conditions such as acne, night blindness and arthritis," according to the FDA statement. The FDA said "Neither vitamin A nor D are proven effective for these conditions in well nourished people."

In the case of vitamin C, Dr. Pauling's claim about the common cold was met with widespread skepticism in the scientific community and great public acceptance. Much of the criticism centered on what was said to be a lack of large scale studies to support his contention.

A recently reported study from the University of Toronto has been described as encouraging by the scientists who conducted it, enough so that they have planned an even larger trial this winter.

There were two major findings in the Toronto study: Of 407 volunteers who took 1,000 milligrams daily, 26 per cent remained free of illness throughout the study, compared with 18 per cent of the 411 persons on dummy pills.

The volunteers who got vitamin C had 30 per cent fewer days of total disability than those in the placebo group.

The 818 subjects were in the program for at least two months, according to the support.

"Further studies," the Toronto researchers said, "will of course be required to confirm this finding and establish its magnitude more precisely, but the high level of statistical significances associated with it encourages us to believe that it is likely to be a real effect rather than a statistical artifact."

Moon becoming expensive dump

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — "It's getting to look like a regular garbage dump down there," was the way it was put by commander Eugene A. Cernan the day the last Apollo left the moon.

Whether garbage or tools for future explorers, America's astronauts have left behind nearly $10 million in used equipment, including three rovers.

The leftovers are scattered at each of the six sites where an Apollo lunar module carrying two men has touched down since July 1969.

A fender broke on Apollo 17's rover the first day Cernan and geologist Harrison H. Schmitt drove it on the moon's dusty surface. The same thing happened on Apollo 15 and 16. Some old moon maps became an ersatz fender on the current mission, blocking out the powder churned up by the electric- powered vehicle.

Scientists say each of the cars can be used again just by recharging or replacing the power cells. And the Apollo 17 rover is also to be used for television transmissions.

There are two golf balls, a feather, 12 pair of yellow boots, some coveralls, packets of uneaten food and a few used toilet bags.

Among the frivolous earth mementos on the moon are the golf balls smacked out by Alan B. Shepard Jr. on Apollo 14 and a feather from the Air Force Academy's falcon mascot left by David Scott of Apollo 15.

There are six American flags, electronically - coded messages from 78 world leaders and a plaque bearing the names of Russian and Americans who died during 20th century man's long journey to the heavens.

Clean sky protection proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rather than dirty up the clear skies of the Southwest, the Interior Department today suggested that power plants using the region's coal should be built near the cities needing more electricity.

A new report said that carrying coal from remote areas of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and Nevada to population centers elsewhere in the country would cost about the same as building generating plants in the Southwest.

There is pending before a federal appeals court in Washington a case which could make the suggestion mandatory policy.

Environmentalists are pressing the government to interpret federal clean air laws as prohibiting states from allowing the air to become any dirtier even in areas like the Southwest where the air quality is better than minimum federal pollution standards. Longstanding plans for the southwestern plants were cited in the court case.

But no matter where the power plants are built, the report concluded, the central problem is finding better air pollution equipment to reduce their smoke.

The Interior Department study, a year in preparation, was also done under pressure from environmentalists who said it was required as an environmental impact statement because the proposed power plants would use some federal lands.

It indicated that a variety of environmental harm would come from continued power plant construction in the Southwest, particularly the Colorado River basin, not only from smoke emissions but also from the strip mining of the coal and the scenic view ruined by the plants and their network of power lines.

A tiny bribe cannot hurt...

Think so? We hear a lot about lakes dying. Entropy they call it. When pollution reaches a certain level, it can't be reversed. That's what bribes do. Contribute to moral pollution. Trust turns to sewage in the community of man. You know what to do about it.

Because vitamins are found in small quantities in almost all foods, a well balanced diet is of great importance in maintaining good health. Indeed, it is said repeatedly, that a well balanced daily diet is sufficient to maintain normal health.

But it has also been pointed out that there are millions of Americans whose diet is a disaster due to poor eating habits or poverty or other factors.

The soda- pop and potato-chip emphasis in the diet of many teen- agers, regardless of economic level, has been cited many times. And others, such as pregnant women, must pay special attention to their diet. A physician's advice is necessary in many cases.

In addition to inadequate diets, there are vitamin problems caused by the failure of the body, in some individuals, to absorb nutrients properly. Some people require more than the average, some less.

The Food and Drug Administration's proposals on vitamins A and D do not concern these problems, but those of overdose. The agency said overdoses of vitamin A can cause various complications, ranging from growth retardation in children to headaches and cracked skin. The possible complications from vitamin D overdoses range from high blood pressure to kidney failure and death.

"Widespread promotion of both vitamins has resulted in "excessive use for conditions such as acne, night blindness and arthritis," according to the FDA statement. The FDA said "Neither vitamin A nor D are proven effective for these conditions in well nourished people."

In the case of vitamin C, Dr. Pauling's claim about the common cold was met with widespread skepticism in the scientific community and great public acceptance. Much of the criticism centered on what was said to be a lack of large scale studies to support his contention.

A recently reported study from the University of Toronto has been described as encouraging by the scientists who conducted it, enough so that they have planned an even larger trial this winter.

There were two major findings in the Toronto study: Of 407 volunteers who took 1,000 milligrams daily, 26 per cent remained free of illness throughout the study, compared with 18 per cent of the 411 persons on dummy pills.

The volunteers who got vitamin C had 30 per cent fewer days of total disability than those in the placebo group.

The 818 subjects were in the program for at least two months, according to the support.

"Further studies," the Toronto researchers said, "will of course be required to confirm this finding and establish its magnitude more precisely, but the high level of statistical significances associated with it encourages us to believe that it is likely to be a real effect rather than a statistical artifact."

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — "It's getting to look like a regular garbage dump down there," was the way it was put by commander Eugene A. Cernan the day the last Apollo left the moon.

Whether garbage or tools for future explorers, America's astronauts have left behind nearly $10 million in used equipment, including three rovers.

The leftovers are scattered at each of the six sites where an Apollo lunar module carrying two men has touched down since July 1969.

Four- legged, flat- topped module descent platforms, abandoned as each fragile lunar craft departed for earth, stand like guardian sphynxes at each junk pile.

Nearby are the most costly castaways, the $2-million lunar roving vehicles — used cars to aid men who might return to the moon.

A fender broke on Apollo 17's rover the first day Cernan and geologist Harrison H. Schmitt drove it on the moon's dusty surface. The same thing happened on Apollo 15 and 16. Some old moon maps became an ersatz fender on the current mission, blocking out the powder churned up by the electric- powered vehicle.

Scientists say each of the cars can be used again just by recharging or replacing the power cells. And the Apollo 17 rover is also to be used for television transmissions.

There are two golf balls, a feather, 12 pair of yellow boots, some coveralls, packets of uneaten food and a few used toilet bags.

Among the frivolous earth mementos on the moon are the golf balls smacked out by Alan B. Shepard Jr. on Apollo 14 and a feather from the Air Force Academy's falcon mascot left by David Scott of Apollo 15.

Sharing the desolate lunar surface with the useful and the useless are landmarks for future space explorers.

There are six American flags, electronically - coded messages from 78 world leaders and a plaque bearing the names of Russian and Americans who died during 20th century man's long journey to the heavens.

Clean sky protection proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rather than dirty up the clear skies of the Southwest, the Interior Department today suggested that power plants using the region's coal should be built near the cities needing more electricity.

A new report said that carrying coal from remote areas of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and Nevada to population centers elsewhere in the country would cost about the same as building generating plants in the Southwest.

There is pending before a federal appeals court in Washington a case which could make the suggestion mandatory policy.

Environmentalists are pressing the government to interpret federal clean air laws as prohibiting states from allowing the air to become any dirtier even in areas like the Southwest where the air quality is better than minimum federal pollution standards. Longstanding plans for the southwestern plants were cited in the court case.

But no matter where the power plants are built, the report concluded, the central problem is finding better air pollution equipment to reduce their smoke.

The Interior Department study, a year in preparation, was also done under pressure from environmentalists who said it was required as an environmental impact statement because the proposed power plants would use some federal lands.

It indicated that a variety of environmental harm would come from continued power plant construction in the Southwest, particularly the Colorado River basin, not only from smoke emissions but also from the strip mining of the coal and the scenic view ruined by the plants and their network of power lines.

Think so? We hear a lot about lakes dying. Entropy they call it. When pollution reaches a certain level, it can't be reversed. That's what bribes do. Contribute to moral pollution. Trust turns to sewage in the community of man. You know what to do about it.

Lt. Murphy to end 31-year patrol career

POPLAR BLUFF — Lt. Lloyd Murphy, a 31- year veteran with the Missouri Highway Patrol, will retire from the force Dec. 23.

Murphy, who has been at Troop E headquarters in Poplar Bluff for 13½ years, started his career with the patrol at Sikeston and later was stationed at Fredericktown.

Murphy is in charge of special services at the patrol headquarters. His replacement and other assigments and promotions will be announced shortly.

Carlock reports for Navy duty

Johnnie Milton Carlock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Carlock Jr. of Sikeston Route Four, has reported for active duty in the U.S. Navy and is presently going through recruit training at the U.S. Naval Recruit Training Center in Orlando, Fla.

Upon completion of recruit training, Carlock will be granted a 14-day leave prior to reporting to his next duty station or service school command.

Campuses to be closed at 4 C'ville schools

CARUTHERSVILLE — The Caruthersville Board of Education has ordered four city schools to initiate a closed campus policy affecting grades one through nine beginning with the second semester of the 1972-73 school year which starts Jan. 23.

The four schools are South Side, West Side, Lee Rood and Washington Junior High.

The board cited the safety of students and the importance of seeing that all students have a balanced noon meal as the primary reasons for the new policy.

Supt. Carl Hutchison said the idea of a closed campus for some of the local schools has been discussed in the past. The principals recently were asked to prepare statements on the pros and cons of a closed campus at their school.

The board was complimentary of the lists presented by the principals on the pros and cons and authorized the secretary to write letters of commendation to the principals.

It was decided that a greater variety of food will be available including two main dishes. A larger selection of sandwiches will also be available.

Students may still bring their own lunches. Soft drink, candy and potato chip machines will be put in at the junior high campus.

According to the new policy, no one will be allowed to leave the school campus during the lunch period. The high school, since no cafeteria is available there, will not be affected by the board's action.

In other board action, it was announced that the board will visit Cape Girardeau and Jackson on Jan. 5 to visit and inspect their schools. Then an architect will be interviewed and one will be hired to make recommendations on whether to add to the present plant or build a new school.

Proposed park system to aid travelers

WASHINGTON — The Department of the Interior has published in the Federal Register of Dec. 12 proposed regulations governing the sale, issuance and use of Golden Eagle and Golden Age Passports. The passports provide entry to areas of the National Park System where entrance fees are charged. The regulations also establish fees for the use of special recreation facilities.

According to an announcement by Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, the public will have 15 days from publication in which to comment on the regulations.

The proposed regulations have been developed in accord with the provisions of Public Law 92-347 which provides for the collection of entrance and special recreation use fees by federal recreation agencies. Agencies other than Interior will be issuing comparable regulations applying to facilities under their jurisdiction.

The Golden Eagle Passport, which sells for $10, admits the bearer and persons accompanying him in a single private, noncommercial vehicle to areas of the National Park System where entrance fees are charged. The Golden Eagle Passport does not cover special recreation use fees.

The Golden Age Passport is issued free of charge to persons 62 years of age or over. It must be applied for in person so that proof of age can be established. It provides the same entry privileges as the Golden Eagle Passport, and in addition provides the bearer a 50 percent discount on special recreation use fees.

Special recreation use fees will be charged for the use of specialized sites, facilities, equipment or services related to outdoor recreation at areas designated by the National Park Service, Fish and Wildlife Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation, Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation, Forest Service, Tennessee Valley Authority, and Corps of Engineers. The Passport does not provide entry fees at these other agencies.

Beginning in January, the Golden Eagle and Golden Age Passports may be obtained at major post offices; at Forest Service headquarters, Washington, D.C., regional offices and headquarters of National Forests; at National Park Service headquarters, Washington, D. C., regional offices and areas of the National Park System where fees are charged; and at a number of recreation areas administered by other federal agencies.

Persons choosing not to purchase the Golden Eagle Passport may enter areas where entrance fees are charged upon payment of a single- visit entrance fee.

The Interior Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation is coordinating the Golden Eagle and Golden Age Passport program with all federal agencies, but will not sell or issue the passports.

A fact sheet, including the 1973 list of federal entrance fee areas where the Golden Eagle Passport is valid, will be available from the post offices and the federal recreation agencies.

Peace frightening to prisoner's wives

(AP) — Peace is frightening; the prospect of the end of the Vietnam war holds terror, not joy, for some Navy wives whose husbands long have been missing in action.

"I'm super-depressed. I'm scared," said Nicki Stegman. Her Navy flier husband has been missing more than five years.

"I'm going to have to face up to death because I really think my husband has been dead for five years now. But I've used it as a crutch," said the attractive, blonde young woman.

"It's going to be like living it all over again. All the horror. Yet I couldn't face it if he came back either .... I'm different now, too. And I've met someone else I might marry."

Two wives whose husbands went down in the same aircraft have differing opinions. One believes her husband is dead; the other doesn't.

Some wives who have clung to slim hope will have to acknowledge for the first time the finality of their husbands' death. Some who thought they were widows may find their husbands are coming back.

Others, aware of profound changes in themselves in the long years of knowing their husbands are most likely dead, are awaiting the final word so they can remarry. Several already have.

Sitting in the living room of her home near the sea, Mrs. Stegman took rapid puffs of a cigarette and said:

"When I heard the news about a possible cease-fire, I started crying so, I had to pull the car over.

"I was happily married, and I lost him. In a way, I'm going to have to face death for the first time. I haven't seen a casket. I haven't had a funeral for him."

"The peace talks are getting on my nerves. It's such a grind. If the cease-fire doesn't come soon, there are going to be a lot of nervous breakdowns among some of the wives. We've just had it."

Lt. Cmdr. Alexander J. Palenscar III was shot down in March 1967 in his A4 Skyhawk attack plane 90 miles out at sea.

Navy planes were there in 10 minutes but found no trace of him. They searched two and one-half days.

"I feel most MIA wives are reaching for great gobs of hope. Our part in the war is finally coming to an end. We're coming to terms with finality," said Leslie Palenscar.

"We won't have anything like the activity that POW wives will have. They'll have emotional problems, but they'll have something ... while we sit here in the backwash of the war."

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — When Yonkers Raceway opens its 73-night spring harness racing meet on March 1, it will offer a $3 superfecta, a wagering gimmick that means picking the correct order of the first four horses in the ninth race.

The $3 superfecta proved a boom when it was introduced at Monticello, N.Y., last April. Last September, Roosevelt Raceway began selling $2 superfectas.

Proposed park system to aid travelers

WASHINGTON — The Department of the Interior has published in the Federal Register of Dec. 12 proposed regulations governing the sale, issuance and use of Golden Eagle and Golden Age Passports. The passports provide entry to areas of the National Park System where entrance fees are charged. The regulations also establish fees for the use of special recreation facilities.

According to an announcement by Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, the public will have 15 days from publication in which to comment on the regulations.

The proposed regulations have been developed in accord with the provisions of Public Law 92-347 which provides for the collection of entrance and special recreation use fees by federal recreation agencies. Agencies other than Interior will be issuing comparable regulations applying to facilities under their jurisdiction.

The Golden Eagle Passport, which sells for $10, admits the bearer and persons accompanying him in a single private, noncommercial vehicle to areas of the National Park System where entrance fees are charged. The Golden Eagle Passport does not cover special recreation use fees.

The Golden Age Passport is issued free of charge to persons 62 years of age or over. It must be applied for in person so that proof of age can be established. It provides the same entry privileges as the Golden Eagle Passport, and in addition provides the bearer a 50 percent discount on special recreation use fees.

Special recreation use fees will be charged for the use of specialized sites, facilities, equipment or services related to outdoor recreation at areas designated by the National Park Service, Fish and Wildlife Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation, Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Reclamation, Forest Service, Tennessee Valley Authority, and Corps of Engineers. The Passport does not provide entry fees at these other agencies.

Beginning in January, the Golden Eagle and Golden Age Passports may be obtained at major post offices; at Forest Service headquarters, Washington, D.C., regional offices and headquarters of National Forests; at National Park Service headquarters, Washington, D. C., regional offices and areas of the National Park System where fees are charged; and at a number of recreation areas administered by other federal agencies.

Persons choosing not to purchase the Golden Eagle Passport may enter areas where entrance fees are charged upon payment of a single- visit entrance fee.

None of the passports or fees covers charges by private concessionaires operating within Federal recreation areas.

The Interior Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation is coordinating the Golden Eagle and Golden Age Passport program with all federal agencies, but will not sell or issue the passports.

A fact sheet, including the 1973 list of federal entrance fee areas where the Golden Eagle Passport is valid, will be available from the post offices and the federal recreation agencies.

Information on special recreation use fees will be available at the areas where such fees are charged.

Peace frightening to prisoner's wives

(AP) — Peace is frightening; the prospect of the end of the Vietnam war holds terror, not joy, for some Navy wives whose husbands long have been missing in action.

"I'm super-depressed. I'm scared," said Nicki Stegman. Her Navy flier husband has been missing more than five years.

"I'm going to have to face up to death because I really think my husband has been dead for five years now. But I've used it as a crutch," said the attractive, blonde young woman.

The Navy unofficially offers no hope that Lt. Tom Stegman of Baltimore will come home when a cease-fire is signed.

"It's going to be like living it all over again. All the horror. Yet I couldn't face it if he came back either .... I'm different now, too. And I've met someone else I might marry."

Two wives whose husbands went down in the same aircraft have differing opinions. One believes her husband is dead; the other doesn't.

Some wives who have clung to slim hope will have to acknowledge for the first time the finality of their husbands' death. Some who thought they were widows may find their husbands are coming back.

Others, aware of profound changes in themselves in the long years of knowing their husbands are most likely dead, are awaiting the final word so they can remarry. Several already have.

Cave Provides Sanctuary for Baby's Birth

Editor's note: This is the second article of a five-part Christmas series about Joseph, the head of Jesus' family, the man who protected and guided him into maturity.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"No room." Another door closed, and another and another. "No room." From house to house, Joseph moved along the clamorous streets of Bethlehem, an urgent entreaty on his lips, a gnawing desperation inside him. "No room."

He glanced up anxiously at Mary, seated sideways on the flat burro saddle. She was bent slightly forward, her lips tight, one arm clutching her body, the other hand tightly gripping a swatch of the burro's mane. But then the strained expression passed and she smiled.

Disconcerted, Joseph said to her, "Mary, how happens it that I sometimes see sorrow and sometimes joy in thy countenance?"

She rubbed a hand across her perspiring brow and covered her eyes, murmuring, "I see two people with my eyes, the one weeping and mourning and the other laughing and rejoicing." She may have been feverish, with childbirth at hand and after the hard journey.

The worried exchange is recorded in the ancient noncanonical "Protevangelion" or "Book of James," who is identified as a kinsman of Jesus and first bishop of Jerusalem. In it, the couple's difficult plight corresponds to the scriptural account.

Joseph knew they could delay no longer. "Help, Lord . . . Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel!" He looked recklessly up and down the crowded street, jostling even after dark with soldiers, travelers, wine-peddlers and jugglers.

At the inn, which also had been without room, he had been told of a cave on a back road at the edge of town where animals were stabled. He grasped the lead rope and started out, keeping an apprehensive eye on his distressed wife.

They had gone a short way when she uttered a small cry and gasped, "Take me down. Take me down for that which is within me presses to come forth."

He lunged back beside her and lifted her down, laying her gently on the hard ground. His hands felt the heaving within her and he trembled. He started to draw out a blanket for her but then, suddenly aware of the oncoming night chill and the predicament that was upon them, he jammed it back into the carrying sack.

He knelt down and picked her up in his arms. With the sack slung from a shoulder, the lead rope tucked around an elbow and carrying Mary before him, he trudged down the rocky road until he found the cave.

Within its dark, windless fastness, the heat of the animals added to the warmth. He brushed a place clear of refuse, shaped a mattress of straw and placed a blanket on it, covering her with another. He ran back to the town, imploring the innkeeper to send a midwife. He fetched flame for his skin-sheathed lantern and ran back to the cave where he built a fire at the entrance.

It was the second watch of night. The swift cold of desert darkness had descended, but the roof of the heavens hung with glittering stars.

Joseph, the work-toughened carpenter of Nazareth and devoutly observant Jew, had come to Bethlehem, the city of his ancestry, to register in a census ordered by the Roman Empire's legate in Syria, Quirinius.

Although not required to bring his new bride, he had done so despite her approaching delivery of a child. Ancient writings imply this was partly because of demeaning gossip in Nazareth about her pregnancy. Other than she, only Joseph recognized its divine origins.

On him lay the burden of shielding that secret. He would not part with Mary, leaving her alone at the mercy of wagging tongues. He had received her as his wife and he would guard her dearly, and also the fragile life within her.

Moreover, gusts of rebellion against the tax decree had flared in Galilee, a rustic, hot-blooded region of recurrent insurrection against the oppressive domination by the pagan Roman conquerors. Guerilla raiders struck at Roman arsenals and patrols, unleashing ruthless reprisals.

To the conscientious Joseph, it would have been unsafe to have left his family behind even though the three-day journey of 720 stadia (about 85 miles) had been a gruelling ordeal for Mary.

He could have foregone the trip altogether if he had been willing to follow Roman preferences by enrolling to be taxed at his city of residence. But Joseph, like other staunch Jews, had stuck firmly to their deep tradition of the land, to the geography of tribal roots.

His "bet abot," the house of his fathers, was Bethlehem, the city of the shepherd-king, David. Joseph belonged to that Davidic line, entrusted with the messianic hope, yet without special social status or privilege. Many Jews of that olden royal line were poor laborers, as was Joseph.

Tradition also ascribes that ancestry to Mary, although the scriptural genealogies, recorded in the gospels of Matthew and Luke, give only the Davidic descent of Joseph, legally the father of Jesus, the male line by which Judaism traced a person's stock.

In the entrance of the cave, Joseph heated a pot of water, occasionally slipping over to kneel beside Mary. Her writhing moments of stress each time gave way to a tide of utter calm. Then the panting exertions would begin anew. He gripped her hand, stroking her wet brow, and once more she grew relaxed.

She lay there quietly in the wavering red glow of the lantern and smiling weakly, told him to leave her for a short while. He hesitated, straightened the cover, and moved back to the entrance, scanning the dark road in prayerful supplication the midwife soon would appear. But there was no sign of her.

The water already steamed and he shifted the pot to one side. As he squatted there on his haunches, a strange sensation came over him. Suddenly, the world seemed halted in its course. Nothing moved. No air stirred. No insects hummed. The fire stood motionless. His own body and breathing seemed transfixed. A total hush gripped the universe.

Then he heard a child whimper and Mary's faint call, "Joseph!"

He was beside her and a great flowing warmth filled that cavern, an enveloping surge of tenderness, a joyous luminescence, and sweet music brushed his ears. She was looking up at him, tears in her eyes, but smiling, too. He saw the baby boy and began crying, too, and laughing.

"Blessed Mary," he said. "Blessed be the Lord."

He brought the pot of warm water and they bathed the child and rubbed him gently with salt to make his frail body harden. She wrapped his limbs and frame in long, torn strips of swaddling bands to keep him firm, and laid him in a manger where Joseph had prepared a pallet of covered straw.

Strangers came, burnous-clad shepherds from the valley below, and as Joseph held the lantern close, they gaped admiringly at the resting child, telling of angelic harmonies that had filled the midnight air. As dawn came, Joseph served dates and boiled eggs and onions to Mary. She nursed the child, her strength renewing.

In the ensuing days, he secured quarters in a small, limestone-dug house and began offering his carpentry work to maintain their livelihood. They would not return to Nazareth until the child grew stronger. Each day, the swaddling bands were loosened and he was rubbed with olive oil.

When the child was eight days old, Joseph obtained the services of a "mohel," who snipped the infant's foreskin, circumcizing him as a sign of eternal allegiance to the Jewish covenant with God. Joseph recited the immemorial words of the ceremony:

"Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who hast hallowed us by thy commandments, and has commanded us to make our sons enter into the covenant of Abraham, our father."

The wound was treated with cumin powder, pulverized bog myrtle and an ointment of oil and wine. The dressing of linen was fastened with a red string. Joseph, carrying out the duty of Jewish fathers, then named the child.

"Your name will be Jesus." The naming of a person took on surpassing importance in Jewish thought, for the very essence of self was considered expressed in a name. It was especially significant in a son, the longing of every Jewish parent. "Jesus" meant the "Salvation of God."

When the 40 days required under Jewish law for the purification of Mary's blood was completed, they took the child to the Temple in Jerusalem for his dedication. Although the burnt offering of a lamb was the due offering for a newborn son, the poor were allowed to give only two birds.

Mary had to remain in the outer Court of Women, watching from a balcony. Joseph entered the Court of Israel, which admitted only men, knelt by the spiked fence and handed the priest the pair of doves. Psalms were spoken and cymbals sounded as the small sacrifice was made on the smoking pyramid-shaped altar.

Apollo legacy is for future

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — And so it ends, the great adventure. Apollo is leaving the moon for good.

It leaves a legacy to a future when man again ventures from his earth to explore his universe.

"May the spirit of peace in which we came be reflected in the lives of all mankind," says a plaque left behind on the plains of Taurus- Littrow.

Eugene A. Cernan, the last of 12 men to feel the moon under his feet, said it too:

"I believe history will record that America's challenge of today has forged man's destiny of tomorrow. And as we leave the moon and Taurus- Littrow, we leave as we came — and God willing as we shall return: with peace and hope for all mankind."

But the legacy is not words; however said, however profoundly felt.

It was 20th century man's greatest exploration, a toe stabbed tentatively into infinite space. It valed the bravado of Columbus and Balboa, Magellan and Coronado and called on the skills of Galileo and Einstein, Goddard and von Braun.

It was an achievement by one nation on earth, but generously dedicated to all.

"We came in peace for all mankind," said the plaque on Apollo 11, the first man-carrying ship to stir the lunar dust.

Never before had the world shared in such high adventure and nothing before so lifted the spirit of all mankind.

Apollo was a boot coming down a ladder, a golf ball hit away, three men who died in a fire at its birth, and three men who survived an explosion in deep space, 50,000 miles from their goal.

Apollo was the unbelievable roar of the fiery Saturn 5 and thousands of men who devoted their life's work to making it fly.

Whenever we're told about something that's "genuine imitation" we have to go lie down and think it out with an ice bag on our head.

Frankly Speaking

By Thomas F. Eagleton

BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN

After I completed my assignment as a delegate to the General Assembly meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, I joined several other senators in making a trip behind "the Iron Curtain." While there we met with the top officials of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Romania and Czechoslovakia.

This trip afforded us with an excellent opportunity to learn first- hand of the policies and aspirations of the leaders of these nations as the United States begins to refocus attention on the political, economic and military affairs of Europe. I would like to relate some of my thoughts on the nations we visited.

YUGOSLAVIA

President Tito spent two hours with our delegation. Bright- eyed, ruddy complexion, upright carriage, and alert, Tito is the picture of good health -- and at the age of 80!

Relations with the Soviet Union, seriously strained in the late 1940s and early 1950s, have somewhat stabilized, although Yugoslavia insists on a significant degree of autonomy. Internally, Yugoslavia faces a constant threat of crisis as separatist groups representing the many ethnic cultures strive for more independence from the central government. But so far Tito has been able to hold his nation together.

After Tito, who and what? "I'm not going anywhere," Tito self- assuredly told our group. He is confident that he can structure the political system to permit a reasonable degree of local autonomy while preserving a cohesive, unified nation.

ROMANIA

Romania has also followed a relatively independent foreign policy since 1964, under its President Ceausescu. Romania has strived for friendly relations with both Western and Communist nations and, with a wary eye on the Soviet Union, has advocated non-interference in the internal affairs of other states.

In domestic affairs, however, Romania is more traditionally Communist in its approach, having one of the more efficient secret police operations in the Eastern Bloc.

Relations with the United States have been excellent in recent years. Presidents Nixon and Ceausescu have exchanged official state visits and last July our two nations signed a reciprocal consular convention.

Romania's key foreign policy objective is the expansion of trade with the United States -- now almost negligible. To accomplish this Romania is requesting Most-Favored- Nation (MFN) tariff status which will lower the barrier to U.S. - Romanian trade.

BULGARIA

Of all the countries visited, Bulgaria remains the most "closed" and Soviet-dominated. Economically, politically and militarily Bulgaria is a complete satellite and apologist for the Soviet Union. To the extent that U.S.-Soviet relations have thawed somewhat, relations between the U.S. and Bulgaria have taken a slight turn for the better. This nation too is interested in improved East-West trade relations and will send a trade mission to the United States next year.

CZECHOSLAVAKIA

Czechoslavakia was by far the most industrial of the four countries visited. I saw the greatest evidence of consumer activity there with large numbers of busy shoppers purchasing a variety of goods in well- stocked stores.

Despite the hustle and bustle in Prague, the mood of the people seemed somber. There was little laughter as the spirit of the people seemed to reflect the oppression that has characterized the government since the Soviet invasion in 1968. The people obviously want their government to liberalize its policies and the leaders know this. There is some evidence the government is trying to respond but the Soviet presence makes it a slow process.

CONCLUSION

All in all, I was greatly impressed at the outwardly friendly attitude of officials of all four countries to the United States. It certainly seems that President Nixon's trip to the Soviet Union and the goodwill it created has been passed on to the Eastern nations.

Cave Provides Sanctuary for Baby's Birth

Editor's note: This is the second article of a five-part Christmas series about Joseph, the head of Jesus' family, the man who protected and guided him into maturity.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"No room." Another door closed, and another and another. "No room." From house to house, Joseph moved along the clamorous streets of Bethlehem, an urgent entreaty on his lips, a gnawing desperation inside him. "No room."

He glanced up anxiously at Mary, seated sideways on the flat burro saddle. She was bent slightly forward, her lips tight, one arm clutching her body, the other hand tightly gripping a swatch of the burro's mane. But then the strained expression passed and she smiled.

Disconcerted, Joseph said to her, "Mary, how happens it that I sometimes see sorrow and sometimes joy in thy countenance?"

She rubbed a hand across her perspiring brow and covered her eyes, murmuring, "I see two people with my eyes, the one weeping and mourning and the other laughing and rejoicing." She may have been feverish, with childbirth at hand and after the hard journey.

The worried exchange is recorded in the ancient noncanonical "Protevangelion" or "Book of James," who is identified as a kinsman of Jesus and first bishop of Jerusalem. In it, the couple's difficult plight corresponds to the scriptural account.

Joseph knew they could delay no longer. "Help, Lord . . . Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel!" He looked recklessly up and down the crowded street, jostling even after dark with soldiers, travelers, wine-peddlers and jugglers.

At the inn, which also had been without room, he had been told of a cave on a back road at the edge of town where animals were stabled. He grasped the lead rope and started out, keeping an apprehensive eye on his distressed wife.

They had gone a short way when she uttered a small cry and gasped, "Take me down. Take me down for that which is within me presses to come forth."

He lunged back beside her and lifted her down, laying her gently on the hard ground. His hands felt the heaving within her and he trembled. He started to draw out a blanket for her but then, suddenly aware of the oncoming night chill and the predicament that was upon them, he jammed it back into the carrying sack.

He knelt down and picked her up in his arms. With the sack slung from a shoulder, the lead rope tucked around an elbow and carrying Mary before him, he trudged down the rocky road until he found the cave.

Within its dark, windless fastness, the heat of the animals added to the warmth. He brushed a place clear of refuse, shaped a mattress of straw and placed a blanket on it, covering her with another. He ran back to the town, imploring the innkeeper to send a midwife. He fetched flame for his skin-sheathed lantern and ran back to the cave where he built a fire at the entrance.

It was the second watch of night. The swift cold of desert darkness had descended, but the roof of the heavens hung with glittering stars.

Joseph, the work-toughened carpenter of Nazareth and devoutly observant Jew, had come to Bethlehem, the city of his ancestry, to register in a census ordered by the Roman Empire's legate in Syria, Quirinius.

Although not required to bring his new bride, he had done so despite her approaching delivery of a child. Ancient writings imply this was partly because of demeaning gossip in Nazareth about her pregnancy. Other than she, only Joseph recognized its divine origins.

On him lay the burden of shielding that secret. He would not part with Mary, leaving her alone at the mercy of wagging tongues. He had received her as his wife and he would guard her dearly, and also the fragile life within her.

Moreover, gusts of rebellion against the tax decree had flared in Galilee, a rustic, hot-blooded region of recurrent insurrection against the oppressive domination by the pagan Roman conquerors. Guerilla raiders struck at Roman arsenals and patrols, unleashing ruthless reprisals.

To the conscientious Joseph, it would have been unsafe to have left his family behind even though the three-day journey of 720 stadia (about 85 miles) had been a gruelling ordeal for Mary.

He could have foregone the trip altogether if he had been willing to follow Roman preferences by enrolling to be taxed at his city of residence. But Joseph, like other staunch Jews, had stuck firmly to their deep tradition of the land, to the geography of tribal roots.

His "bet abot," the house of his fathers, was Bethlehem, the city of the shepherd-king, David. Joseph belonged to that Davidic line, entrusted with the messianic hope, yet without special social status or privilege. Many Jews of that olden royal line were poor laborers, as was Joseph.

Tradition also ascribes that ancestry to Mary, although the scriptural genealogies, recorded in the gospels of Matthew and Luke, give only the Davidic descent of Joseph, legally the father of Jesus, the male line by which Judaism traced a person's stock.

In the entrance of the cave, Joseph heated a pot of water, occasionally slipping over to kneel beside Mary. Her writhing moments of stress each time gave way to a tide of utter calm. Then the panting exertions would begin anew. He gripped her hand, stroking her wet brow, and once more she grew relaxed.

She lay there quietly in the wavering red glow of the lantern and smiling weakly, told him to leave her for a short while. He hesitated, straightened the cover, and moved back to the entrance, scanning the dark road in prayerful supplication the midwife soon would appear. But there was no sign of her.

The water already steamed and he shifted the pot to one side. As he squatted there on his haunches, a strange sensation came over him. Suddenly, the world seemed halted in its course. Nothing moved. No air stirred. No insects hummed. The fire stood motionless. His own body and breathing seemed transfixed. A total hush gripped the universe.

Then he heard a child whimper and Mary's faint call, "Joseph!"

He was beside her and a great flowing warmth filled that cavern, an enveloping surge of tenderness, a joyous luminescence, and sweet music brushed his ears. She was looking up at him, tears in her eyes, but smiling, too. He saw the baby boy and began crying, too, and laughing.

"Blessed Mary," he said. "Blessed be the Lord."

He brought the pot of warm water and they bathed the child and rubbed him gently with salt to make his frail body harden. She wrapped his limbs and frame in long, torn strips of swaddling bands to keep him firm, and laid him in a manger where Joseph had prepared a pallet of covered straw.

Strangers came, burnous-clad shepherds from the valley below, and as Joseph held the lantern close, they gaped admiringly at the resting child, telling of angelic harmonies that had filled the midnight air. As dawn came, Joseph served dates and boiled eggs and onions to Mary. She nursed the child, her strength renewing.

In the ensuing days, he secured quarters in a small, limestone-dug house and began offering his carpentry work to maintain their livelihood. They would not return to Nazareth until the child grew stronger. Each day, the swaddling bands were loosened and he was rubbed with olive oil.

When the child was eight days old, Joseph obtained the services of a "mohel," who snipped the infant's foreskin, circumcizing him as a sign of eternal allegiance to the Jewish covenant with God. Joseph recited the immemorial words of the ceremony:

"Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the universe, who hast hallowed us by thy commandments, and has commanded us to make our sons enter into the covenant of Abraham, our father."

The wound was treated with cumin powder, pulverized bog myrtle and an ointment of oil and wine. The dressing of linen was fastened with a red string. Joseph, carrying out the duty of Jewish fathers, then named the child.

"Your name will be Jesus." The naming of a person took on surpassing importance in Jewish thought, for the very essence of self was considered expressed in a name. It was especially significant in a son, the longing of every Jewish parent. "Jesus" meant the "Salvation of God."

When the 40 days required under Jewish law for the purification of Mary's blood was completed, they took the child to the Temple in Jerusalem for his dedication. Although the burnt offering of a lamb was the due offering for a newborn son, the poor were allowed to give only two birds.

Mary had to remain in the outer Court of Women, watching from a balcony. Joseph entered the Court of Israel, which admitted only men, knelt by the spiked fence and handed the priest the pair of doves. Psalms were spoken and cymbals sounded as the small sacrifice was made on the smoking pyramid-shaped altar.

In keeping with a hallowed heritage, and by Joseph's humble offering of the poor, Jesus belonged to God's purposes.

Apollo legacy is for future

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — And so it ends, the great adventure. Apollo is leaving the moon for good.

It leaves a legacy to a future when man again ventures from his earth to explore his universe.

"May the spirit of peace in which we came be reflected in the lives of all mankind," says a plaque left behind on the plains of Taurus- Littrow.

Eugene A. Cernan, the last of 12 men to feel the moon under his feet, said it too:

"I believe history will record that America's challenge of today has forged man's destiny of tomorrow. And as we leave the moon and Taurus- Littrow, we leave as we came — and God willing as we shall return: with peace and hope for all mankind."

But the legacy is not words; however said, however profoundly felt.

It was 20th century man's greatest exploration, a toe stabbed tentatively into infinite space. It valed the bravado of Columbus and Balboa, Magellan and Coronado and called on the skills of Galileo and Einstein, Goddard and von Braun.
